FINDHORN, a small village seaport, lying on the northern headland of Findhorn bay, in the parish of Kinloss. Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district, is virtually the port of Forres, from which it is distant in a northerly direction about 5 miles; it is the centre of the fishery trade of this portion of the coast, and has also a small coasting trade, chiefly in pit props, which are shipped to Newcastle and Sunderland. The harbour is well sheltered. Kinloss station, on the Highland railway, is distant about 2 miles, the line constructed from that station to Findhorn is now closed. There is a United Free church in the village, and also a Public library. The population in 1901 was 486.

KINLOSS is a parish on the Moray Firth, 3 miles from north to south, and the same in width, with a station on the Highland railway, and is in Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district; the village is 2 miles north of Forres, and has an Established church and a school. Here, a short distance from the church, are the scanty remains of the Cistercian Abbey of Kinloss, founded in 1141 by King David I., and confirmed to the monks by papal bull in 1174; it was colonised by monks from Melrose in 1303, and the abbot was mitred and sat in Parliament. King Edward I. once stayed at the abbey for nearly a month. Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart., of Ballindalloch Castle, Mrs. Dunbar-Dunbar, of Seapark, R. C. Munro Ferguson esq. M.P. of Novar, John Mackessack esq. J.P. of Kinloss, Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen, Alexander Mathieson esq. J.P. of Lower Langcot, the trustees of the late William Mathieson esq. of Muirton House, Montagu James Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange Hall, and R. H. Mackessack esq. of Woodside, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,184 acres; rateable value, £7,618; population in 1901 was 929.

FOCHABERS is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Bellie, Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, 52 miles east of Inverness, 12 south-west of Cullen, 9 east of Elgin and 8 north-west-by-north of Keith, with a terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway from Orbiston, and another at Fochabers Spey, locally in Banffshire, and 4 miles north-east, on the Great North of Scotland Railway; situated on the north road from Aberdeen to Inverness, and lying in a deep valley, through which the Spey runs at a little distance to the west of the town, and is crossed by a stone bridge. The streets diverge from a square, on the south side of which stands the parish church. The water supply to the burgh was provided at the sole expense of the late Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. and the inhabitants have erected a fountain in the square to commemorate the gift. The streets are lit by electricity supplied from works at Oldmills, the property of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. The burgh is governed by a baron bailie appointed by the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. There are Episcopalian, Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. A new United Free church was erected in 1900, at a cost of about £3,000, left for the purpose by the late Wm. Pringle esq. of Inverness, a native of this place. The Public Institute and Free Library was erected in 1905, at a cost of about £2,600; it is a fine building of stone, and contains a concert hall with stage, scenery and fittings, a reference library, and reading and billiard rooms. At the west end of the town is a Castle, the seat of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O. The Castle is a fine modern mansion, standing in an extensive deer park of over 1,200 acres; the present building is grafted on to the old tower of the Earls of Huntly, who held it from 1450 to 1684; it then stood in a gloomy morass (known as Bog of Gight), over which a stone causeway was the only means of access: this tower, which is 90 feet in height, now forms the most conspicuous feature in a large quadrangular building of four storeys, flanked by lower wings which are connected to the main building by long galleries; the interior contains many valuable pictures and some statuary. The Public baths here were the gift of the late Duchess of Richmond and Gordon. The Free school at the east end of the town, founded by Alexander Milne esq. a native of Fochabers, is a building in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £4,338; by his will, dated New Orleans, 17th October, 1836, the founder bequeathed to the parishes of Bellie and Ordiquish the sum of 100,000 dollars for establishing a free school; and a balance of about £17,000 was eventually invested in heritable security, and yields an annual income of about £550, by means of which 300 children are educated. A memorial fountain was erected in October, 1895, to Major Wilson, slain during the Matabele war of 1893. The population in 1901 was 981, and number of inhabited houses, 260.

BELLIE parish was formerly partly in Banffshire, but by an Order of the Boundary Commissioners it is now wholly in Elginshire; it is a flat agricultural district, bounded on the west by the river Spey, and extends about 5 miles from north to south and 9 from east to west; it is in the Morayshire poor combination. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O. and the Countess of Seafield, of Cullen House, are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish comprises 12,927 acres; rateable value, £4,654; the population in 1901 was 2,102.

FORRES.

FORRES is a royal burgh, in Morayshire poor combination, the head of a small debt court district, capital of the parish of its name and the seat of a presbytery; 201 miles north-by-west from Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen, 165 by way of Brechin and Huntly, 75 north-west of Aberdeen, 27 north-east of Inverness, 21 west of Fochabers, 20 east of Fort George, 12 west of Elgin and 11 east of Nairn, with a station on the Highland railway. It is a neatly-built, clean town, and stands on rising ground; at a distance of about 5 miles is the village of Findhorn, which is its seaport. Forres possesses one of the most remarkable stone obelisks of ancient date in Britain; this interesting object stands at the east end of the town, and is supposed to commemorate a pacification concluded here between Malcolm II. and Sveno, a Danish invader, about the beginning of the 11th century; it is an enormous slab of grey stone, upwards of 20 feet in height, supported by a socket which conceals at least three feet more, and the shape resembles that of a very long wedge, or, as some fancifully describe it, a highland broadsword; the figures upon the obelisk, which are presumed to represent a battle and subsequent treaty, are wonderfully distinct, considering that they must have withstood the assaults of wind and weather during the last eight centuries. At the western extremity of the town, on an eminence, once stood a castle, wherein Duffus, one of the early Kings of Scotland, was perfidiously killed by Donald, governor of the fortress, which circumstance, it is said, Shakespeare has made use of in his dramatic version of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth; and it was on the waste in the neighbourhood that this hero, along with Banquo (according to the old historians) met the "weird sisters," who gave him so many fatal promises. The exact spot on which that meeting is asserted by the country people to have taken place is marked by a small clump of trees, about 200 yards north from the post road between Forres and Nairn, near the toll bar, 5 miles from the former of these places, 1½ miles from Brodie station and nearly on the confines of the two counties of Moray and Nairn. On the castle eminence is a granite obelisk to the memory of Dr. Thomson, who sacrificed his life by over exertion in his attention to the wounded Russians after the famous battle of Alma. Upon an eminence to the south-east of the town stands a tower, erected by the inhabitants of Forres in honour of Lord Nelson, the walk to which, as it winds round the hill, is extremely pleasant; from its elevated situation, a fine view is hence obtained, and the tower is conspicuous for a considerable distance. Sloping to the north, where the river Findhorn sweeps round from the south-west through the Forest of Darnaway, is a modern mansion the seat of the Earl of Moray; adjoining it is the old Castle of Darnaway, in which is a fine hall, built by Earl Randolph, regent of Scotland during the minority of David Bruce, and capable of holding 1,000 men under arms. Here Mary Queen of Scots held her court in 1568. Altyre is the residence of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart.; Brodie Castle, of Major Ian A. M. Brodie D.S.O., D.L., J.P., and Sanquhar House, of Alexander Edward esq. About 2 miles below the castle, the river, which debouches into Findhorn bay, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge, which was erected by a joint stock company, in shares of £10 each. Forres is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 11 councillors, and unites with Nairn, Portrose and Inverness in returning a member to Parliament, the present representative of the Inverness burghs being John Annan Bryce esq. M.A. A sheriff small debt court sits once in every two months for the recovery of debts not exceeding £12. The trade of Forres is not of an extensive character. Dye works, manufactories for woollens, artificial manures, boots and shoes and bobbins, chemical works and flour mills being the principal branches. Three-quarters of a mile from the centre of the town is situated the Leachonil Hospital, erected in 1891, at a cost of between £6,000 and £7,000, for the burgh of Forres and the six adjoining parishes. The North of Scotland Bank Limited, The British Linen Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. In the centre of the High street stands the Town House, a substantial structure, with a tower in the Scottish Baronial style surmounted by a spire; the building comprises the gaol, a court house, a council room &c.; and near to this stands a handsome Gothic market cross of four storeys, the lower one having eight pointed arches with angle buttresses surmounted by finials. A newspaper, the "Forres, Elgin and Nairn Gazette," is published every Wednesday owing to the configuration of the country round about Forres, the burgh enjoys a remarkable immunity from rain, the rainfall for the past few years having been ascertained from accurate observations to be about the lowest in Scotland, and this circumstance, and the soil being porous, mark out Forres as an excellent health resort. Cluny Hill House, on one of the eminences in the vicinity of the town, was built for a hydropathic establishment. There are two masonic lodges in the town. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free church, and others for Episcopalians and the Evangelical Union. Anderson's Institution, founded by Jonathan Anderson esq. a native of Forres, for educating children of the humble class from the parishes of Forres, Rafford and Kinloss, was built in 1824, and adjoins the institute; this school is now placed under the Forres School Board. The Forres Public school stands opposite. The Mechanics' Institute, also in High street, possesses a library, a reading room and two public halls; the large hall will seat 1,000 persons. A corn market is held every Tuesday; cattle sales are also held in the auction mart every Tuesday. Peeling markets for hiring servants are held on the Saturday before the 28th of May (called Whitsunday market) and the Saturday before the 28th of November (called Martinmas market). The area of the parish comprises 5,440 acres; rateable value, of landward, £9,052; burghal, £19,552; the population in 1901 was 5,241, of which 4,313 are in the burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1903 was 596, and in 1906 was 577. The Earl of Moray, Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart., of Altyre, Montagu James Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange Hall, Kinloss, George Grant esq. of Inverness, Mrs. Roney Dougall, of Ratho, Alexander Edward esq. of Sanquhar, George B. Macpherson Grant esq. of Drumduan, the marriage contract trustees of the late R. D. Grant esq. of Thornhill, and Mrs. Grant are the principal landowners of the parish.

GRANTOWN-ON-SPEY.

GRANTOWN-ON-SPEY is a burgh and modern village in the civil parish of Cromdale, on the north bank of the Spey, with a station on the Highland railway, and another, 1½ miles distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway, rather more than a mile south of Castle Grant, 35 miles south-east from Inverness, 22 south from Forres, 8 north-east from Duthill and 6 north from Abernethy and Nethy Bridge: it is the head of a small debt court district, and was made a police burgh in 1898, and is situated in the ecclesiastical parish called "Inverallan." Grantown was begun about the year 1774, under the patronage of the Grant family. Large numbers of visitors from Edinburgh, Glasgow and London come here during the summer months. Branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited are established in the town, and there is also a branch of the National Security Savings Bank. There are also three excellent and commodious hotels—the Grant Arms, Palace and Strathspey. The Established church for the quad sacra parish of Inverallan is an edifice of stone, built in 1884 by Caroline Stuart, Dowager Countess of Seafield; there is also a United Free church, an Episcopalian church and a Baptist chapel. Free church services are held in the Institute buildings. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Monday in January, the second Monday in May and the first Monday in September. The Cottage Hospital was built in 1884 by the Dowager Countess of Seafield, in memory of Jan Charles, 8th Earl of Seafield (d. 18 Feb. 1881). The Young Men's and Women's Christian Association Hall, erected in 1897, is a building of stone, containing lecture and concert room, tea rooms and reading room; there is also an Orphan Institution. Castle Grant, a modern mansion, with which is incorporated an ancient structure called "Comyns Tower," is a seat of Caroline, Countess Dowager of Seafield.

Here are Golf links for ladies and gentlemen, a bowling green and tennis courts.

Fairs are held on the Tuesday after the 12th and Monday before third Wednesday in January, Monday before third Wednesday in February, Monday before third Wednesday in March (cattle, horses, sheep and hiring), Thursday before third Wednesday in April (sheep), Monday after third Wednesday in April (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after second Wednesday in May (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after Beatty (for horses, cattle and sheep) and first Friday (Fisget Fair) in June, Monday after third Thursday in July (horses, cattle and sheep), first Wednesday (shearers') and Monday after third Tuesday (horses, cattle and sheep) in August, Monday after third Tuesday in September (horses, cattle and sheep), Monday after third Tuesday in October (cattle and sheep), Monday after second Wednesday (horses &c.), and Wednesday preceding term week (hiring). KNOCKANDO is a parish in the Morayshire poor combination, lying northwest of the river Spey, which divides it
 from Banffshire, and having the parishes
 of Rothes on the north-east, Dallas on the north-west, Cromdale on the south-west
 and a short border of Edinkillie on the west; its length from north-east to southwest is about 16 miles, and breadth 6. The church lies about the centre of the parish, 10 miles south-west of Rothes and 13
 south of Elgin.

There is a Mission church at Elchies.
 James William Hamilton Grant esq. D.L.,
 J.P. of Wester Elchies and Carron
 House Sir George McPherson Grant bart.
 of Ballindalloch Castle, Banffshire, and
 the Countess of Seafield, of Castle Grant,
 are the principal landowners. The area
 of the parish is 28,134 acres; rateable
 value, £13,763; the population in 1891
 was 1,712 and 1901, 1,756.

Archiestown, a village in this parish, is about 6 miles south-west of Rothes, 2½
 miles from Carron, the nearest railway station, and 3 from Aberlour station, both
 on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten
 section of the Great North of Scotland railway. It has a United Free church.
 The population in 1901 was 330.

LHANBRYD.

See ST. ANDREW'S LHANBRYD.

LOSSIEMOUTH, which is composed of the districts of Branderburgh, Lossiemouth, Seatown and Stotfield, and was created a burgh in 1890 under the Lindsay
 Act, is in the parish of Drainie, 5 miles
 north from Elgin, situated on the banks of the Lossie, at its influx into the Moray
 Firth, in the Morayshire poor combination
 and the small debt court district of Elgin;
 it has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway (Elgin and Lossiemouth branch),
 and is the seaport for Elgin, and a resort
 for sea-bathers. Many residents in Elgin
 and elsewhere have erected houses here
 which they occupy during the summer months. The harbour was opened in 1839,
 and has since been improved, at a cost of £20,000, so as to render it a safe and commodious haven for shipping. In 1891 a grant of £20,000 was obtained from the Government for deepening the harbour to admit vessels of larger tonnage. The improvement of the harbour, and the facilities of railway communication which
 this place has now enjoyed for several years, have given a stimulus to trade which
 has rendered it one of the most important
 seaports north of Aberdeen. The Established church of St. Geradine is a fine building with a square tower: there is also a United Free church, erected, at a cost of £2,400, in place of one destroyed
 by fire; it is in the Early English style,
 with an octagonal tower and spire, which serve as a landmark to mariners. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about
 £1,100, was opened 2 Feb. 1885, by Sir
 George Macpherson Grant, of Ballindalloch, and Mrs. Dunbar-Brander, of Pit-gaveny; the Public Library, in High street, is a building of stone, erected in 1903 at a cost of about £2,000.

DRAINIE is a parish on the shore of the North Sea, bounded east by Urquhart
 parish, west by Duffus and south by New Spynie; it is 5 miles from east to west, by 3½ from north to south, and is nearly devoid of hills. The parish church is 2 miles southwest of Lossiemouth. The golf links here
 rank amongst the finest on the North-East coast.

Sir William Gordon Gordon-Cumming
 bart. of Altyre, Forres, and the trustees
 of the late Capt. J. B. Dunbar-Brander, of Pitgaveny House (d. 1902), are the principal landowners. The area of the parish of Drainie comprises 6,948 acres;
 rateable value, £16,808; the population
 in 1891 was 3,922. The area of Lossiemouth is 421 acres; the population in 1891, 3,486, and in 1901, 3,904.

ROTHES is a police burgh, and also a parish within the Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district; it is bounded on the south by Knockando, on the north by Elgin, Birnie, St. Andrew's and Speymouth, and on the east by the river Spey; it is 9 miles in length by an average breadth of 3. The town, which was formed into a police burgh in 1884, is about 60 miles west-north-west from Aberdeen and 10 south from Elgin, situated near the western bank of the Spey, into which the Rothes burn runs. The Great North of Scotland railway has stations at Rothes town and Danda-leith, and the Highland Railway Company one at Orton, in the eastern part of the parish. There is an Established parish church, and a United Free church, rebuilt in 1900, at a cost of £2,150. Adjoining is a lecture hall holding 250 people. A town hall was erected in 1900 at an estimated cost of £2,200. Castle Hill was presented to the town in 1897 by the Dowager Countess of Seafeld as a recreation ground, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. There are distilleries in the town, the chief of which are the Glen Grant Glenlivet Distillery, established in 1840, Glen Rothes, Glen Spey and Speyburn-Glenlivet and the Macallan Distillery is also in the neighbourhood. Auchnroath is the residence of Andrew John Mitchell-Gill esq. F.S.A., J.P. The Dowager Countess of Seafeld, of Castle Grant, Grantown, John Wharton Wharton Duff esq. of Orton, and Mrs. Margaret Emily Dunbar-Dunbar Rivers, of Glen of Rothes, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 19,816 acres; rateable value, £14,482; the population in 1891 was 2,263, and in 1901, 2,361. The area of the burgh is 672 acres; population in 1901, 1,621; inhabited houses, 370. There is a fair for harvest held the third Thursday in July. Post, T. M. O., S. B. & A. I. ST. ANDREW'S LHANBYRDE parish, which is in Morayshire poor combination and small debt court district of Elgin, comprehends what were originally two parishes, viz.: St. Andrew's and Lhanbyrde, the former including Linkwood and Barmuckity; the latter lay to the east of St. Andrew's and comprehended the lands of Coxton, Pittenseir &c. The parish church is about 3 miles south-east of Elgin. Lhanbyrde is a village $\frac{3}{4}$ miles east of Elgin, in the parish of St. Andrew's Lhanbyrde, and had a population in 1901 of 294, and 74 inhabited houses. There are stations here on the Keith and Elgin section of the Highland railway and on the Great North of Scotland railway. The country is flat and well cultivated, and is noted for geological specimens. The Duke of Fife K.T., P.C., G.C.V.O. the Dowager Countess of Seafield, Capt. G. B. Dunbar-Brander, of Pitgavney House, and Thomas Mackenzie esq. of Innes, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,197 acres; rateable value, £8,946; the population in 1901 was 1,243, of which 34 are in Elgin burgh.

Post & M. O. & T. O., S. B. & A. & I. Office, Lhanbyrde; Alex. Johnston, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Elgin, 11.10 a.m. (for callers only) & 12.45 p.m.; dispatches, 7.55 a.m. & 7.35 p.m.; sundays, arrival, 4.30 p.m.; dispatched, 7.35 a.m.

FIFESHIRE.

FIFESHIRE is an extensive and populous maritime county in the east of Scotland; it is a peninsula, having the Firth of Forth on the south, the German Ocean on the east, and the Firth of Tay on the north, which river separates it from Forfarshire and Perthshire. Its western border is very irregular; commencing at Newburgh, on the Tay, it follows that of Perthshire south to near Auchtermuchty, turning west as far as Damhead, whence it extends with Kinross south to the Leven and west nearly as far as Rumbling Brig, when the Perthshire border again commences and is continued southwards to the Firth of Forth at Torry. The coast line is about 80 miles in extent; the breadth from its eastern apex to its western point, where it intersects Kinross and Perth, is about 35 miles, and a line direct south from Newport on the Tay to Earlsferry is about 17 miles, and one from Newburgh to Kinghorn 20 miles; towards the west, however (from Burntisland to the verge of Kinross-shire), it is not more than 10 miles across; the extreme length, from north-east to south-west, in a curved line, is fully 40 miles. The regularity of its figure is much interrupted by the intrusion of Kinross-shire, which creates a considerable indentation, not far from its centre, on the west. The area comprises 322,844 acres of land and 1,624 of water. In regard to size, this county is sixteenth, and in population the seventh. In 1891 the population was 190,365, and in 1901, 218,840, viz.: males 105,124; females, 113,716; the inhabited houses being 41,434 in 1891 and in 1901, inhabited 48,241; uninhabited 3,868; building 585.

Early History.—At an early period the district of Fife included Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire, and part of the counties of Perth and Stirling; it was then designated Ross, a term signifying a peninsula, and seems to have been under one general jurisdiction. This large territory has long since been dismembered.—Clackmannan was first taken from it, and next Kinross was erected into a distinct shire. The origin of the name "Fife" has much troubled etymologists, nor has a satisfactory conclusion ever been arrived at upon the subject. The monkish chroniclers assume its derivation from one Fyffus Duffus, a hero of whom nothing more appears to be known than that he was a chieftain who performed some great exploits, and did the country essential service in war. The ancient history of Fife is enveloped in nearly similar obscurity. Its original possessors were the Celts, and their invaders the Romans; and towards the close of the 9th century the King of the Scots obtained paramount sway over the district. Between this period and the 11th century the country was in a great measure either the property or under the jurisdiction of a succession of "thanes" of the title of Macduff; one of these, Duncan Macduff, was created Earl of Fife by Malcolm III., about 1057; and from this time till the family honours were merged by the marriage of female heirs or extinction in other families, and finally lost by forfeiture in 1424, the Earls of Fife were amongst the most influential of the Scottish peerage. After a lapse of more than three centuries, the ancient title of Earl of Fife was revived as an Irish peerage, in 1759, in the person of William Duff, Lord Braco of Kilbride, who, according to his genealogists, derived his descent from the original earls. The Duke of Fife, who was raised to a dukedom in 1889, is the lineal descendant of this person, and now inherits the title and privileges—the estates of the family being situated principally in Aberdeenshire and Banffshire.

Soil, Surface and Climate.—The peninsula of Fife was originally almost an entire forest, full of swamps, and while in this condition was the haunt of wild beasts, especially swine of a monstrous size; it is understood that such animals were not exterminated in the reign of James V., who, like his forefathers, often made Fife the scene of his hunting expeditions. In this county are found four kinds of soil, differing considerably in quality, and generally occupying distinct tracts of the country. Along the braes facing the Firth of Forth the composition of the land is for the most part excellent, being deep, rich loam, good clay, and gravel mixed with loamy earth, based chiefly on whin rock, and produces good crops of wheat, barley, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes; north from the waving line which bounds this territory to the base of the hills on the south side of the vale of Fife, and from St. Andrews on the east to the western parts of the county, the soil is in general vastly inferior—a great proportion being cold, poor and very wet clay; the tract of the "Howe of Fife," which comprises both sides of the river Eden as far as Cupar, is very productive; it consists of loam, partly deep and moist, and partly light and dry, with also a considerable proportion of moor and moss; in the hilly district, from the vale to the river Tay, the land is uniformly of the best description, having much rich loam, clay and gravel. The peninsula of Fife exhibits on its surface a series of vales, stretching from west to east parallel with the sea on each side, and of greater or less dimensions; these vales, which from the undulating character of the country are in some places not so distinct as in others, are the basins of different small streams, which merge either in the Firth of Forth or St. Andrew's Bay. Extending in a north-easterly direction to the Tay, the Ochil Hills penetrate the county, forming a ridge of moderate elevation, upon which many cattle and sheep are pastured. The other eminences of greatest altitude in Fifeshire are Kellie Hill, 800 feet; Norman's Law, 850; Largo Law, 965; East Lomond Hill, 1,470; and West Lomond Hill, 1,713 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is, perhaps, as genial and salubrious as that of other districts more to the south; the fogs, which formerly were continually exhalant from the lochs and marshes, have been effectually dissipated by the drainage of the damp lands, and the general spread of cultivation. Altogether Fife is a most important district; its agricultural prosperity and capabilities, its manufacturers, its fisheries, and its mineral treasures, its burghs, seaports, and fine harbours, and its domestic and foreign commerce, form a combination of advantages that most favourably distinguish this shire.

The chief crops as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1905," were oats, 39,258 acres; barley or bere, 20,214; wheat, 10,827; beans, 984; rye, 846; total of corn crops, 72,135; turnips and swedes, 22,540 acres; potatoes, 16,889; cabbage &c. 566; vetches or tares, 580; total of green crops, 40,688; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 28,615 acres; (not for hay), 35,645 acres; permanent pasture (for hay), 3,753 acres; (not for hay), 72,819 acres; bare fallow, 458; small fruit, 201 acres. The total area of land is 322,844 acres, of which 10,466 are mountain and heath land, used for grazing; 26,235 acres of woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1905 comprised 7,960 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 2,396; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 12,387; other cattle, 38,748; ewes kept for breeding, 36,434; other sheep, 69,246; sows kept for breeding, 895; other pigs, 4,101.

Produce and Manufactures.—The shire is fortunate in possessing inexhaustible mines of coal, with sandstone, limestone and some ironstone. Coal and lime are wrought only in the southern division of the county, between the two extremities, and some miles inland; within this district there are as extensive lime and coal works as can be seen in Scotland. In 1905, 7,241,430 tons of coal were produced, valued at £2,081,914; 95,069 tons of fire-clay, value £27,332; brick clay (from quarries), 26,836 tons, value £671; 23,720 tons of iron ore, value £6,820; 109,498 tons of limestone; igneous rocks, 136,392 tons. The sandstone found in this part is of the very best quality; from its beauty it is exported to Edinburgh, where some of the finest edifices have been built with it. In 1905 64,943 tons were raised. Marl is abundant in some places, so likewise is fine clay, for the composition of bricks, tiles and pottery. From the possession of the above, and the exuberant produce of corn and cattle, it is a common saying among the people of Fife that their county could support itself better, without the aid of imported articles, than any other district in Scotland. Besides supplying home consumption, it has a very large export trade in corn, potatoes, pigs, black cattle, lime, coal and sandstone—not to mention that of its manufactured goods. Lead has been discovered in the western Lomond, and mines of this ore have been profitably worked in the parish of Kemback; pebbles, much admired for the high polish of which they are susceptible, have been found in different places, with agates and rubies of fine water. The staple manufacture of Fife is linen goods, in the weaving of which many towns, villages and hamlets are busily employed without intermission; fine diapers and shirtings and the most elegant table linen are produced from the looms of this county; of this trade Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy are the principal seats; while the yarns, composed of foreign flax, are mostly spun and bleached on the Leven and in the adjacent places. Iron founding and machine making are prosecuted with success at several places, and the manufacture of fishing nets, floor cloth, fire clay and terra cotta goods and linoleums and floor cloths are likewise branches of importance. The fisheries are also a source of wealth to this county, shoals of herrings during the spawning season visiting its coast, in the capturing and curing of which many of the population are employed. Turbot, soles, plaice, cod, haddock and ling are also found in abundance, the three first-named being taken in the shallow waters on the east coast. The fishing industry is centred at Kirkcaldy, under which place full particulars will be found.

Rivers and Railways.—Exclusive of the Forth and the Tay, the county is watered by several streams—none of which, however, are entitled to the denomination of river, except the Eden and the Leven, which both abound with excellent salmon; the first rises in the Lomonds and flows through the town of Cupar, and debouches at Guardbridge in St. Andrew's Bay; the Leven rises from a loch of the same name in Kinross-shire, passes eastward through the centre part of the county and reaches the Firth of Forth at the town of Leven. Fife cannot boast of many lakes, and those that it does possess are but of small extent, the principal being Lndores, Kilconquhar, Lochgelly, Camilla and Pittylochs. The North British railway, branching at Alloa to the east and north-east, enters the county with the former branch at Oakley and proceeds to Dunfermline, whence there are branches north to Saline, Cowdenbeath and Kely, and thence into Kinross, and south to Inverkeithing and North Queensferry; the main line continues through Lochgelly to Thornton, where a branch leaves it north to Marckinch (with a branch to Leslie), Ladybank and Newburgh, where it turns westward to Moncrieff and Perth; from Thornton there are two branches southward, one turning to the west runs through Dysart and Kirkcaldy to Burntisland, and the other sweeping eastward passes through Wemyss and Buchhaven to Methil, opposite to Leven. The main line continues by Cameron Bridge, through the coast towns of Leven, Largo, Pittenweem and Crail, to St. Andrews; from this latter city the line passes through Leuchars Junction to the Tay Bridge, for Dundee, with a loop line to Leuchars, Tayport, Newport and the Bridge; the north-eastern branch after leaving Alloa passing through Kinross-shire and Auchtermuchty, and crossing the Newburgh branch at Ladybank, continues through Cupar to Leuchars Junction, where it joins the Tay Bridge line.

Divisions, Representations &c.—This county forms a sheriffdom, under one sheriff depute; but being divided into an eastern and a western district, each is placed under the jurisdiction of a sheriff substitute; in these two districts are comprehended the four sub-divisions of St. Andrews, Cupar, Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy. It has politically and ecclesiastically attached to it the islands of Inchcolm, Inchkeith and May, in the Firth of Forth. Fifeshire comprises sixty-two parishes; it contains seventeen Royal burghs (out of the 70 contained in all Scotland), and of these thirteen are burghs with parliamentary representation; these, conjointly with Queensferry in Linlithgowshire and Sterling in Stirling-shire, return three members. The shire formerly returned but one representative, but is now separated into the Eastern and Western divisions, each of which sends a member. The parliamentary constituency for 1906 was: Eastern Division, 9,998; Western Division, 15,272.

ABBOTSHALL. see KIRKCALDY.

ABDIE is a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Tay, extends $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from north to south by 3 broad, and is bounded on the east by Dunbog and Monimail, south and west by Collessie and Newburgh; it lies amongst the Ochil Hills: its kirktown being 2 miles south-east of Newburgh. The hamlets of Mount Pleasant, Glenburnie, Grange and Lindores are in this parish and also the Loch of Lindores, a sheet of water covering 70 acres. The Newburgh and North Fife line is in course of construction between Newburgh and St. Fort stations. There are quarries of whinstone, from which are exported large quantities of paving stones. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late David Wilson esq. of Inchyre, William Guild esq. J.P. Frederick Lewis Maitland esq. and the Marquess of Zetland. The area comprises 4,835 acres; rateable value, £6,075; population in 1891, 900, and 1901, 664, of which 258 are in Newburgh burgh; population of ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 695.

Mount Pleasant is now included in the Burgh of Newburgh for municipal purposes, and the names of residents are given with that town.

ABERDOUR.

ABERDOUR is a parish and a village seaport and burgh of barony, on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from north to south by the same in breadth, 12 miles north-west from Edinburgh (across the Firth of Forth), 9 south-west from Kirkcaldy, 8 south-east from Dunfermline and 3 west from Burntisland, and within the Parliamentary Division of West Fife. There is a station here on the North British railway, opened in 1890, and connecting Inverkeithing and Burntisland. Burntisland parish bounds it on the east, Auchtermolty and Beath on the north and Dalgetty on the west. The small island of Inch-Colm, about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the coast, belongs to the parish. A small ridge of hills runs from east to west. Aberdour is a place of considerable antiquity, and belonged in the 12th century to the family of Dupont, from whom it passed to the Mortimers by marriage, afterwards to the Douglas, one of whom, in 1457, was created Lord Aberdour and Earl of Morton, and whose castle, which stood close to the village, was burnt down by accident in 1745, while occupied by a detachment of troops. The Mortimers appear to have bestowed Wester Aberdour upon the Abbey of Inch-Colm, and it was made a burgh of barony under the abbot in 1500; Easter Aberdour, which was retained by the family, being made a burgh of barony in 1643. Aberdour is a favourite place of resort during the summer season, there being good bathing and the village having a warm aspect. Ready access is obtained by steam vessels and other means of conveyance from the opposite shore. The ruins of the church, dating from before 1178, lie to the south-east of the castle, and consist of chancel, nave with south aisle of three bays, and porch, the two latter having been added about the end of the 15th century; the arcade has plain chamfered arches on plain cylindrical piers with circular bases and capitals. In the village are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches; there are also two board schools in the parish. The island of Inch-Colm lies in the mid-channel of the Firth of Forth, about 2 miles south of Aberdour, and contains the extensive remains of an Augustinian monastery of St. Columba, founded about 1123, by Alexander I.; the buildings, of grey stone, consist of the nave and short massive tower of the church, with a transeptal adjunct, the octagonal Chapter House, with a gabled roof and a muniment room above it, half of a building called the Lady Chapel, and some remains of domestic buildings, all disposed round an open quadrangle about 45 feet square; about 80 feet west of the monastery is a barrel vaulted oblong structure from 15 to 18 feet long, and said to have been a hermit's cell; there is also a well. The hamlet of Donibristle Colliery is three miles north from the village, and the fine policies of Donibristle Park, a seat of the Earl of Moray, lie to the west (the house being in the adjoining parish of Dalgetty); part of Fordell village is also in this parish. The Earl of Moray, the Earl of Morton, Charles Grey Wetherpoons esq. J.P. and Patrick Hill Normand esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,805 acres; rateable value in 1907, £ ; the population in 1891 was 1,977, and 1901, 1,997; these figures included 805 persons in the village of Aberdour in 1901, and 487 persons in the hamlet of Donibristle in 1901.

ANSTRUTHER,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ANSTRUTHER EASTER AND ANSTRUTHER WESTER.

ANSTRUTHER is a seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, about 20 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy, 10 by road and 15 by rail from St. Andrews, and is composed of the royal and parliamentary burghs of Anstruther Wester and Anstruther Easter, together with the seaward portion of the royal and parliamentary burgh of Kilrenny; this portion, which contains the whole of the fishing population, consists principally of the fishing village of Cellardyke or Nether Kilrenny, which, though really a suburb of Anstruther Easter, is itself in Kilrenny parish and burgh. The two Anstruthers are separate royal burghs and civil parishes, the dividing line being the small Dreel Burn. The port is the market town for the surrounding district, and there is a station here on the Thornton Junction, Leven and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The town is lighted with gas by a private company. This place was of great importance before the union with England, carrying on an extensive trade with Holland and France; fish curing is the staple trade, and there are now (1907) about 150 boats up to 74 feet long, as well as a number of steam herring drifters, some built of wood and others of steel. The harbour, situated at Anstruther Easter, has been enlarged at a cost of about £80,000; the present harbours (inner and outer) give a space of 1½ acres, and will hold 500 fishing boats, and the inner harbour affords about 16 feet of water at full spring tide. In addition to fish curing, a considerable amount of business is done in the exporting of potatoes &c. the importation of ice, and the manufacture of fishing gear &c. There are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited in the town.

ANSTRUTHER EASTER is a royal burgh and parish (included in the Port of Anstruther), and is bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth, west by Wester Anstruther and north and east by Kilrenny; the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A sheriff's small debt court is held here quarterly for the parishes of Anstruther Easter and Wester, Elie, Kilconquhar, Kilrenny, Newburn, Pittenweem, St. Monance and Crail. A weekly corn market is held on Friday. This burgh, together with St. Andrews, Cupar, Crail, Kilrenny, Anstruther Wester and Pittenweem, forms the St. Andrews parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. Dr. Thos. Chalmers, the celebrated orator and divine, was born here in April, 1780, and died 31 May, 1847; Professor William Tennant F.R.S. linguist and poet, and author of "Anster Fair," was also born here in 1784, and died 15 Feb. 1848, and Professor Goodsir, of Edinburgh University, was also a native of this place. There is an Established church, a United Free Church, called the "Chalmers' Memorial Church," and erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, and Evangelical Union and Baptist chapels. The Manse of the Established church dates from 1590. The Waid Academy, opened September 6th, 1886, is endowed mainly from funds mortified by Andrew Waid, Lieut. R.N. a native of Anstruther Easter, who died in 1803. By his will, dated 1800, he founded the building as an academy for orphan boys and seamen's boys in indigent circumstances, and for their maintenance, clothing and such education as would instruct them in the great principles of the Christian religion, and fit them for serving in the British Navy with reputation; the amount of the trust estate at his death was about £5,000, but at the time of the transfer to the governors of the academy it had increased to about £15,000, and is now administered under a scheme promoted by the Trustees and by the School Board of Anstruther Easter and approved by the commissioners under the Education Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882, and sanctioned by Order in Council, August 11th, 1884; the school building, which is built of stone, with a tower in the centre, has a fine and commanding appearance.

William Baird esq. of Elie, is the principal landowner for Anstruther Easter, the area of which is 28 acres; rateable value, £5,868; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 1,033, and in 1901, 1,187, and of ecclesiastical, 1,024.

ANSTRUTHER WESTER, included in the Port of Anstruther, which adjoins Anstruther Easter, is also a parish and royal burgh, and holds its charter of incorporation from James IV. in 1587. A bridge connects the two burghs. It is bounded on the north and west by Carnbee, on the south by the Firth of Forth, and on the east by Anstruther Easter and Pittenweem; in the small debt court district of Anstruther. This burgh was disfranchised in 1853, when three managers were appointed by the court of session. In 1869 it again recovered its municipal status, and is now governed, under the Burgh Police Act of 1892, by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six other councillors. The town is supplied with water, and the streets are lighted and drained. There is an Established church.

Mrs. Irvine, of Grangemuir, and Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. of Balcaske, are the principal landowners of Anstruther Wester, the area of which comprises 911 acres; rateable value: burgh, £2,816; landward, £1,384; the population in 1891 was 593, and in 1901, 558.

The population of the entire seaport of Anstruther 1891 was 4,268, and in 1901, 4,743.

The population of the royal burghs in 1901 were, Anstruther Easter, 1,190, and Anstruther Wester, 476.

The numbers of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 were:—Anstruther Easter, 229; Anstruther Wester, 94.

ARNCROACH, see CARNBEE.

AUCHTERDERRAN is a parish in the western part of the county, bounded by Beath and Ballingry on the west, Abbots-hall and Auchtertool on the south and south-east, Dysart on the east and Kinglassie and Portmouk (Kinross-shire) on the north. It has an irregular outline, and is about 4 miles long from north to south, and about 3 miles broad. The water of Orr flows eastward through the parish, and in the southern part there is a sheet of water called Loch Gelly, which discharges itself by a small rivulet into that stream. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and coal mining. Most of the parish is under tillage, and the rest in pasture. A considerable bed of coal and ironstone traverses this part of the county; the former has long been celebrated for its excellent quality; the latter is of the black band variety, but is not now worked. The parish contains part of the town of Lochgelly, at which place and at Cardenden there are stations on the Thornton and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. The area comprises 7,874 acres; rateable value, £52,707; the population in 1891 was 6,185, and in 1901, 8,626, of whom 4,811 were in the town of Lochgelly.

Bowhill is a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 715.

Glencraig is also a village; the population in 1901 was 687.

P. & T. M. O., S. B. & A. & I. O. Cardenden (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added to them; Peter McGregor, sub-postmaster. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 6.45 & 11.5 a.m. & 3, 4, 6 & 7.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery.

AUCHTERMUCHTY, WITH THE VILLAGE OF DUNSHALT.

AUCHTERMUCHTY is a parish and a royal burgh, the latter, 19 miles west-south-west from St. Andrews, 14 south-south-east from Perth, 5 south from Newburgh, 17 north from Kirkcaldy and 28 nearly due north from Edinburgh. A station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway is adjacent to the town. The land in the vicinity of the town is remarkably rich and fertile, and the climate is considered very salubrious; the parish is bounded north by Perthshire, west by Strathmiglo, south by Falkland and east by Colliestie; the town is situated on the road from Kinross to Cupar Fife, 9 miles from the latter town. It is irregularly built; many of the houses are thatched and low, but the greater portion are of a superior appearance. A stream of water called "Lover's Pool" runs through the town, dividing it into two nearly equal parts; it was constituted a royal burgh by James IV. which charter was confirmed by James VI. and it still enjoys all the privileges arising therefrom, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, nine councillors, a treasurer and town clerk, and has a sheriff's small debt court, which is held quarterly. A considerable trade is carried on here in manufacturing linen. Malt and distilling are likewise engaged in, and the making of scales, beams and weighing machines has been established here for upwards of two centuries. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a Savings Bank. The Victoria Hall, erected in 1865, is a fine building. The parish church, near the centre of the town, is an ancient structure, and has been enlarged. The People's Institute comprises reading, recreation and temperance refreshment rooms; it also contains some bedrooms and a hall for meetings. There is also another reading room in the town, and a well-stocked library. Fairs are held on the last Monday in April and the Thursday after the second Monday in July. Lord Ninian Edward Crichton-Stuart, of Falkland & W. B. Skene esq. D.L., J.P. of Pillour house, Strathmiglo, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,531 acres; rateable value of parish, landward £7,745 with railway, of burgh £2,806; the population of the parish in 1891, 2,002, and in 1901 was 1,884, of whom 637 were in the burgh.

Dunshalt is a small village situated about 1 mile south from and in the parish of Auchtermuchty, where there is a linen factory and a board school. Auchtermuchty railway station is about half a mile distant. The population in 1901 was 300.
Post, T. M. O., S. B. & A. & I. & I. Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, Auchtermuchty (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added to them; William Stocks, postmaster. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 6.20 p.m.; dispatches, 6.55 a.m. & 4.5 & 7.30 p.m.

Post Office, Dunshalt; Miss Catherine Smart, postmistress. Letters received through Auchtermuchty, which is the nearest mail order & telegraph office, 1½ miles distant. Deliveries, 9.30 a.m. & 7.5 p.m.; dispatches, 3.5 & 5.25 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters

AUCHTERTOOL is a small inland
parish and village, the latter situated 4
miles west from Kirkcaldy and about the same distance north-west from Kinghorn,
bounded on the east by Abbotshall, on the south by Kinghorn and Aberdour, on the north by Auchterderran and on the west by Beath; extends from east to west 5 miles
by 2 in breadth; small debt court of Kirkcaldy. From a little lake called Camilla-loch, in this parish, the river Teel takes its
rise; on the verge of the loch are the ruins
of Camilla Castle, or "Hallyards." Auchterteel is said to have been the original name
of the parish, deriving the appellation from
its situation on the banks of the Teel.

The Earl of Moray of Dornbristle House,
Aberdour, is the principal landowner.
The area comprises 2,738 acres; rateable
value, £10,044; the population in 1891
was 721, and in 1901, 742.

BALMERINO, or Balmerinloch (pronounced Balmernie), is a parish lying on the south bank of the firth of Tay, and extending 4 miles from east to west by $2\frac{1}{2}$

broad; its kirktown is about 5 miles west of Newport; the parish is bounded east by Forgan, west by Flisk and Creech and south by Kilmany, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Fife. The nearest railway station is at Wormit, on the Leuchars and Tay Bridge section of the North British line, about 3 miles distant. The harbour of Balmerino is small, and at one time a considerable quantity of grain was exported from it, but this trade has now declined. To the west, and on the banks of the Tay, stands the ancient village of Balmerino, where there is an Established church, and near the village are the ruins of the once famed abbey, a beautiful structure, begun by Alexander II. and his mother, Ermengarde, queen of William the Lion and daughter of Richard, Viscount of Bellomont, in 1229; the ruins are now richly clothed with ivy and surrounded with fine trees. Gaudry, a small village in the above parish, is about 4 miles south-west from Newport, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ from Wormit station. Here is a Board school and a United Free church. The aspect of the county is of an undulating character, and agricultural. This place once conferred a peerage title on the Elphinstone family, lords Balmerinloch, but the title became extinct on the death of Arthur, sixth lord, who was beheaded 18 Aug. 1746, for his participation in the rising of 1745. Mrs. Anstruther-Duncan, of Naughton House, and Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn esq. D.L., J.P. of Birkhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,431 acres; rateable value, £5,296; the population in 1891 being 668, and in 1901, 576.

Post Office, Gaudry; Andrew Husband, postmaster. Letters received through Wormit S.O. arriving at 10.25 a.m. & 7 p.m. & are dispatched at 6 a.m. & 3.45 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Wormit, and the nearest telegraph office at Kilmany. No Sunday delivery of letters

BEATH is a parish about 4 miles north to south, and about 3 in breadth, bounded on the west by Dunfermline; on the east by Ballingry and Auchterderran; on the north by Cleish (Kinross-shire), and on the south by Aberdour and Dalgetty; it is in the parliamentary division of West Fife, and poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and contains the police burgh of Cowdenbeath, and the villages of Keltly, Lassodie and Oakfield, a small part of Keltly being in Kinross. The North British railway has stations on its Dunfermline and Kinross section at Cowdenbeath and Keltly, and the same company's section from Thornton Junction to Dunfermline runs through Cowdenbeath station. The ground is hilly, and is watered by the Orr, and a stream which flows from Loch Pitty, a shallow lake on the western boundary. Here is an Established church. Several collieries are in active operation, and give employment to most of the inhabitants. The principal landowners are the Earl of Moray, Sir Charles Elphinstone Adam, bart. of Blairadam, Kinross, the trustees of the late James Dewar esq. and the Fife Coal Company Limited. The area of the parish is 6,345 acres; rateable value in 1907, £61,009; population in 1891, 8,298, and in 1901, 15,812. The population of Keltly in 1901 was 3,986 (including 158 in Kinross); Lassodie, 1,293; and Hill of Beath, Kirkford and Bleachfield, 1,332.

Keltly and Oakfield are villages in this parish, and adjoin Blairadam, in Kinross-shire, each about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Cowdenbeath, and the former has a station on the Kinross branch of the North British railway. At Keltly are the collieries of the Fife Coal Company Limited. There is an Established church and two United Free churches.

Lassodie is a colliery village in the parish of Beath, nearly 6 miles distant from Dunfermline, its post town, and has a United Free church and a public school. Population in 1891, 853.

A small part of Lumphinans village, including the post office, is in this parish. Cantsdam (including Ashfield and Viewfield Rows) form a village in the parish; population in 1901, 495. Foulford Place and Road is also a village; population in 1901, 364.

BUCKHAVEN, METHIL and INNER LEVEN now form a united
police burgh, town and village, in the parish of Wemyss, and afford a good shipping station for the export of coal, and a shelter for fishing boats, Buckhaven
having a harbour and Methil a new dock
with appliances for loading colliers; both
are situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 2 miles south of Leven
and 7 north-east of Kirkcaldy. There are stations at Methil and Buckhaven, on the branch line of the North British railway from Thornton Junction. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. An office for the Burgh Police Commission was built in 1902 in College street, Buckhaven. Methil is a quoad-sacra parish, and has established
and United Free churches; there is also
an established church at Buckhaven,
three United Free churches, and one at Inner Leven. The dock of Methil, opened
5th May, 1887, was built by Randolph
Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. of Wemyss
Castle, but is the property of the North British Railway Co. and in 1906, 2,793,252
tons of coal were shipped and 94,677 tons
of merchandise, consisting chiefly of pit-
wood, sawn wood, esparto, flax and hemp
were imported. The number of vessels
which entered the docks during the year
1906 were 1,437 steam ships and 147 sailing ships, with a total tonnage of 1,165,854
tons. The dock has an area of 1½ acres,
with width at entrance of 50 feet, and a
depth of water at ordinary spring tides
of 23 feet, and at neaps of 19 feet; it is fitted with three of Sir William Armstrong & Co.'s hydraulic hoists, each capable of loading a vessel with 2,500 tons of coal in 24 hours; there are also hydraulic
cranes for working other import and export goods. The dock is connected with the main railway system of Fifeshire, and is in direct communication with all the Fife collieries, and is lighted by electricity. A new dock has been constructed, at a cost of £200,000, the area being 7 acres. The manufacture of fishing nets is carried on
at Buckhaven. The populations in 1891
were—Buckhaven, 4,006; Methil, 1,662
and Inner Leven, 579, and in 1901, 4,522,
2,686 and 792 respectively; area of burgh,
225 acres; rateable value, now including
the dock, £40,152.

BURNTISLAND

Is a royal and parliamentary burgh, seaport and parish, with a station on the North British railway, situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 8 miles by ferry, or 20½ by rail north-by-west from Edinburgh, 16 south-east from Kinross, 6 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 east from Aberdeen. The parish, originally a portion of Kinghorn, is 3 miles square and consists of the Bin and Dunearn ranges of hills, with the High Bents on the east side of the town, extending into Kinghorn parish: some portions of the hills contain fine specimens of basaltic columns, which are eruptive through the limestone and sandstone strata. The burgh is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded east and north by Kinghorn and west by Aberdeen. Burntisland was originally a burgh of regality under the Abbot of Dunfermline, from whom it was purchased in 1541 by James V. and erected into a burgh royal, this charter being confirmed by James VI. in 1587 and renewed by Charles I. in 1632. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and together with Kirkcaldy, Dysart and Kinghorn forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708 and returning one member. The town council are the police commissioners and the local authority, and four members of the town council with four representatives from the N. B. Railway Co. constitute the harbour commissioners; there is also a parish council: the municipal, police and parliamentary boundaries were made identical by an Act obtained in 1876, and the same powers have been granted to the magistrates as are at present possessed by the sheriff and justices of peace under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854; this admits of the administration of justice in nautical cases being conducted in the town instead of in Kirkcaldy as previously. There are police and bailie courts, the sheriff and small debt courts for the burgh being held weekly at Kirkcaldy. The town is lighted with gas from works, the property of the burgh, and managed by the members of the town council. The nearest markets are those held at Thornton on Mondays and Dunfermline on Tuesdays, but an annual fair is held here on the third Friday in July. Burntisland is now the head quarters of the custom house business for the district, which embraces the line of coast from Aberdeen to Anstruther.

Burntisland was once a place of great trade, particularly with Holland, but from 1603 its trade declined till 1848, when the opening of the Fife railway imparted an impetus to the export trade in coal and pig iron. The West dock, built by Mr. Walter Scott, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. comprises an area of 5½ acres, and cost about £100,000, including railway connections and hydraulic loading machinery; the depth of water in the dock is 22ft. 9in. at high water of spring tides and 19ft. 9in. at neap tides; the width of entrance is 39ft. The East dock was constructed at a total cost of about £390,000, by Sir John Jackson, contractor, of Westminster, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. and Robert Henderson C.E. and was completed in 1901; the area is 12½ acres; the depth of water, 28ft. 6in. at high water of spring tides, and 25ft. 6in. at neap tides, and the width of entrance 60ft. There is still a metropolitan ferry here, and the North British Railway Co. keep a steamer plying at stated intervals between Burntisland and Granton; the number of vessels, steamers &c. outwards in 1906 was 1,534. The railway from Burntisland westward to the Forth bridge, opened in March, 1890, and constructed at a cost of over £140,000, has developed a picturesque district some 8 miles in extent; the line enters Burntisland by a long viaduct, which passes at the bottom of High street and crosses Harbour place, reaching the main line east of the present terminus. A direct line to the coalfields by Auchtertool is now completed. The herring curing trade, which used to be very flourishing, is extinct although Burntisland is still a fishing station for the Firth fishery.

The railway locomotive works, situated between the Lammerlaws and the old town, employ 300 men. The sandstone quarries at Grange and Newbiggin furnish large quantities of stone for building purposes; both quarries having railway connections and sidings of their own, near Staleyburn. The limestone mine belonging to the Carron Co. at Staleyburn, is now also in connection with the railway. At Grange, about a mile from the town, is a distillery, belonging to Messrs. Young and Co. Limited. There are branches here of the National and Commercial Banks of Scotland Limited. The music hall, built by the late Joseph Young, of Dunearn, and presented to the town by his trustees, will hold 400 persons, and is frequently used for lectures, concerts and public meetings. A golf course of 18 holes has been formed by the Burntisland Golf Co. Limited, and a club house erected on the grounds. There are also three tennis courts and a bowling green, and in Gladstone terrace are recreation grounds. Rossend Castle, built in 1119, by the abbots of Dunfermline, occupies a very picturesque situation, and has a fine square keep: it was the residence of Cromwell during the occupation of Burntisland by his troops, and was a favourite resting place of Queen Mary; it is now the property of the trustees of the late James Shepherd.

The Established church, which bears the date 1592 over its entrance, resembles in style that of the North Church, Amsterdam, and was no doubt erected under Dutch influence, Burntisland having a large intercourse with Holland in the 16th cent. The galleries, adorned with antique carving, were erected in 1613, and formerly occupied by the Guilds, whose badges and insignia in some cases ornament the front, and there is a state seat for the magistrates. It was within these walls that James VI. met the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and pressed his proposal for a new translation of the Scriptures, which eventually resulted in the production of the present authorised version. The old kirk of the parish was at "Litel Kingorne," or Kirkton, and when the present church was built in 1592-4 there was some litigation with the heritors before the services could be moved, which was not terminated until 1632; the "auld kirk" is now a ruin. In connection with the Established church is a fine hall, opened in 1894, and seating 600 persons. The Episcopal church of St. Serf is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and will seat 200 persons: attached are Mission churches at Aberdeen and Kinghorn: the rectory, net value £190, has been held since 1898 by the Rev. H. Hardy M.A. of Durham University. There are two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and a Scottish Church mission at Ferguson place. The cemetery at Bentfield was established by the Town Council at the cost of about £4,000. The only mortification belonging to Burntisland is Watson's, consisting of the annual rent of the East Binnlands, amounting to an average of £74, which is divided between three widows and the Board schoolmaster for the education of poor children. The Board schools were erected in 1876, at a cost of £6,000, and in 1901 a Higher Grade school was added at a further cost of £6,000. Here also is an Episcopal school founded by the late Rev. G. H. Forbes. The Earl of Morton, Conaglen, Ardgour; Middleton Rettie esq. of Dunearn; the trustees of R. Kirke, of Greenmount, and the trustees of the late James Shepherd, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,565 acres; gross rateable value of the parish in 1906-7, £34,000; rateable value of the burgh, gross, £36,318. The population of the parish in 1901 was 5,599, including 4,846 in the burgh and 141 on board vessels in the harbour.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 831. Post, T. M. O. S. B. & A. & I. & Telephone Call Office, High street, Burntisland; David Wood, postmaster. Deliveries, 8 & 11 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, north, 6.45 a.m. & 1.10 & 4 p.m.; south, 7.50 & 10.35 a.m. & 2.40, 4.45, 5.35, 7.35 & 9 p.m.; to Glasgow, 7.40 a.m. & 1.10 p.m.

CARDENEN, see AUCHTERDEERAN.

CARNBEE is a parish and village, the latter about 3 miles north-east from Pittenweem; the parish also contains the hamlets of Arnbroach and Owenstone; it extends 5 miles from east to west with a breadth of 3 and is bounded north by Cameron, east by Crail and Kilsenny, south by Pittenweem, south-west by St. Monance and west by Kilconquhar. The nearest railway station is at Pittenweem, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and has an Established church. The minerals are limestone and freestone. The greater part of the land is rich and fertile, and well cultivated, the rest being adapted for pasture. Of late years dairy farming has been carried on in the parish extensively. A ridge of hills runs through the centre of the parish, the highest of which is Kellie Law, having an altitude of 800 feet above the level of the sea. Kellie Castle, formerly the seat of the Earls of Kellie, stands in this parish, on the south side of Kellie Law, and occupies a prominent and beautiful situation; it is now the residence of Mrs. Lorimer. Balcaskie House, the seat of Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P. principal landowner, stands on a rising ground between St. Monance and Pittenweem. The grounds are extensive and thickly wooded. The area comprises 8,396 acres; rateable value, £10,549. The population in 1891 was 952, and in 1901, 910.

.CAIRNEYHILL, see Carnock.

CAMERON is a parish about 4 miles south of St. Andrews. It is bounded on the north by St. Andrews, on the east by Carnbee and Kilconquhar, on the south by Denino, and on the west by Ceres, and has a length of about 6 miles, and a breadth of 4 miles; it is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews and contains the villages of Lathones, Peat Inn and Radernie and part of the village of Denhead. The nearest railway station is at Mount Melville (2 miles distant), on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The greater portion of the land is well cultivated, the remainder being pasture, well drained by numerous small streams. There are Established and United Free churches. Cupar and St. Andrews are convenient places for hunting visitors. Colonel Charles St. Clair Anstruther Thomson, of Charleton, Mrs. Graham Bonar, of Greigston, James H. Rigg esq. of Drumcarro, James Cheape esq. of Straththrum, John Purvis esq. of Kinaldy, James Younger esq. of Mount Melville and Denock. D. Webberburn Thoms esq. of Feddinch and Winthank, and the trustees of John Paterson esq. of Langraw, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 9,325 acres; rateable value, £7,933; the population in 1891 was 886, and in 1901, 738.

Post Office, Denhead; Robert Swan, sub-postmaster. Letters received through St. Andrews. Delivery, 11.10 a.m.; dispatched, 10.20 a.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. Strathkennis is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant

CELLARDYKE, see KILRENNY.

CERES (or Cyrus) is a parish, with a village of same name, 3 miles south-east of Cupar-Fife station on the Thornton Junction and Dundee section of the North British railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Fife, extends 8 miles from north-east to south-west with a breadth varying from 2 to 4 miles. The boundaries of the parish are on the north Kemble and Cupar parishes, on the east Cameron and Kilconquhar, on the north-east St. Andrews, on the south Largo, and on the west Cults. The parish church, built in 1806, occupies an elevated site and has an embattled tower with spire. It will seat 1,100 persons. There are two United Free churches in the village; and two public schools, situated respectively at Craigrothie and Ceres. The inhabitants are mostly employed in agriculture. Lime and coal are found at the Teasess. Races are regularly held here on the last Saturday in June, to commemorate the battle of Bannockburn, fought 24 June, 1314. The Leith Holiday Home (formerly the Adamson Institute) provides a fortnight's holiday for upwards of 300 poor, and in many cases delicate, children from the slums of Leith. It is supported entirely by voluntary contributions; T. and R. J. Davidson, Cupar, joint secretaries; Mrs. Hempseed, matron.

The kennels of the Fife Foxhounds are situated at Harleswryd, in this parish; Col. Alex. Sprot of Stravithie M.P.H. John Stratton, huntsman. Cupar and St. Andrews are convenient places for hunting visitors. In the western part of the parish, on the border of the Howe of Fife, are the ruins of the House of Scots-parvit, and about a mile south of the village is Craighall Castle, the seat of the Hope family from 1626, but now also in ruins; and near Craigrothie are the ruins of Struthers, the original seat of the Earls of Crawford. The farm of Easter Pitscottie occupies the site of the house occupied by Robert Lindsay, of Pitscottie, author of the "Chronicles of Scotland." Col. Charles Frederick St. Clair Anstruther-Thomson M.V.O., J.P. of Charleton, Colinsburgh, Edward Gorrie Baxter esq. of Teasess House, Lady Gertrude Cochrane and the Hon. Thomas H. A. E. Cochrane M.P., J.P. of Crawford Priory, Frederick B. Sharp esq. of Wemyss Hall, Sir Alexander Hope bart. of Pinkie, and Henry Walter Hope esq. D.L., J.L. of Luffness, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,063 acres; rateable value, £12,494; the population in 1891 was 1,677, and in 1901, 1,545 in the parish and 607 in the village, of which 138 are in Cupar parish.

Craigrothie, Chance Inn, Pittscottie and Baldinnie are four small villages in the parish of Ceres.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. Office, Ceres; Alexander Wilson, postmaster. Letters received through Cupar. Deliveries, 8.25 a.m. & 2.35 & 7.35 p.m.; dispatches, 5.15 a.m. & 12.5 & 4.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

COLINSBURGH is a large village in the parish of Kilconquhar and small debt court district of Anstruther, on the road from Elie to Cupar-Fife, 2½ miles north-west from the former and 10 south-east from the latter and 4 miles east from Largo. Kilconquhar, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, is the nearest station. This place was originally built by Colin, third Earl of Balcarres, who died in 1722, and is named after him. There is a United Free church here, and a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The "Galloway" Library and Reading Room was built in 1903, from money bequeathed for the purpose by the late Thomas Carstairs Galloway esq. who also left a sum of £600, the interest on which provides three bursaries and a similar amount for the yearly benefit of the deserving poor. A weekly corn market is held every Thursday. The population in 1891 was 384, and in 1901, 352.

COLLESSIE (a Gaelic word denoting the bottom of a glen) is a parish with its kirktown 4 miles south-east of Newburgh and containing the village and police burgh of Ladybank (which see). It is in the small debt court district of Cupar and extends 8 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth: it is bounded on the north by Newburgh and Abdie, west by Auchtermuchty, south by Kettle, east by Monimail; there are railway stations at Ladybank and Collessie, the former on the main line and the latter on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. Oliver Haig esq. of Ramornie, J. Boyd Kinner esq. of Kinloch, Charles J. M. Mackrill-Orichton esq. of Lathrisk, and Miss Elizabeth H. Leslie-Melville, of Melville, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 8,782 acres; rateable value of landward, £11,469; the population in 1891 was 2,093, and in 1901, 2,161, including 821 in the burgh of Ladybank. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 674.

The hamlet of Giffordtown lies between Collessie and Ladybank

COWDENBEATH, a growing town in the parish of Beath, was constituted a police burgh in 1890 and is situated just below the junction of the Dunfermline and Kinross and the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction sections of the North British railway, which has a station here. The burgh is supplied with water from works constructed by the local authority in 1887, and now under the control of the Town Council, and is lighted by electricity from works the property of the burgh. The parish church lies a mile north-west of the town, and there are also two United Free churches, a Baptist chapel, and two Board schools. A drinking fountain, surmounted by three lamps, was erected in the High street, and presented to the town, in 1897, by H. Mungall esq. J.P. in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The area of the burgh is 322 acres; rateable value in 1903 was £16,323; population in 1891, 4,249, and in 1901, 7,467.

CRAIGROTHIE, see CERES.

CRAIL is a seaboard parish, occupying the extreme north-easterly shore of the Firth of Forth, the Fife Ness promontory marking the mouth of the Firth; the seaport of same name as the parish lies a few miles south-west of the Ness, is a royal and parliamentary burgh; it was known formerly as Cathair-nille or Carr-nille, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, and its breadth of 2 miles lies along the North sea, besides which a part almost as large lies inland north of Kilrenny and Carnbee parishes, and on the north-west and north the boundaries are the parishes of Denino, St. Leonard and Kingsbarns. The burgh, which consists of two main streets, one containing some massive old houses, is mentioned by old historians as a town of considerable note so early as the middle of the 9th century. Its importance in later days has, however, greatly declined, notwithstanding it possesses great capabilities as a port, and with the exception of crab fishing, for which it is famous, it enjoys but very little trade. This in some measure may be ascribed to the inconvenience of its harbour, for it is otherwise eligibly situated. Its principal exports consist of grain and potatoes; the imports are chiefly coal. Crail was erected into a royal burgh by David I. and confirmed by Robert Bruce, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. In conjunction with St. Andrews, Cupar Fife, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, and Pittenweem, it forms the St. Andrews parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. It is now a place of summer resort, and has two golfing courses and public bowling greens, and there is also a public library of 2,000 volumes. A little to the east of the harbour are the fragments of a castle, or palace, once the residence of David I., the remains of which consist chiefly of a wall, now partly enclosed in a garden. The parish church was anciently collegiate, and here John Knox preached. The celebrated James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrews, 1661-79, was minister of the church for 12 years, and his handwriting is still to be seen in the session records. The Golf Hotel is a small but comfortable inn. Wormiston House is the seat of the Earl of Lindsay J.P. The Earl of Lindsay, Col. Sir Elliott Williams Erskine bart. D.L., J.P. of Cambo, Charleton, J. B. Monypenny esq. of Pitmilny, Philip G. Anstruther esq. John Duncan esq. of Kirkmay, Mrs. Mary Anderson Horsley, of Kirkmay House, Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard M.A. of Rednock House, Stirling, and Lieut-Col. George Hannay J.P. of Kingsmuir, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,348 acres; rateable value, £15,956, viz., burghal £6,774, landward £9,181; the population in 1891 was 1,704 and in 1901, 1,605, of which the burgh contained 1,077. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 215.

CREICH is a parish in the north of the county, with its kirktown 5 miles north-west of Cupar, which is the nearest railway station, and on the North British system. A new line is now (1907) in course of construction to connect St. Fort with St. Andrews, and will have a station half a mile south of Luthrie village. Creich parish is in the small debt court district of Cupar and extends 3 miles from north to south by 2 wide; it is bounded on the north by Fflek, on the south by Moonzie and Monimul, on the east by Balmerino and Kilmany, and on the west by Dunbog. There is an Established church here, and a United Free church at Brunton. On a little eminence near the ruins of the old church are the vestiges of a Roman camp, and at a short distance therefrom are the remains of a castle, which formerly belonged to Cardinal Beaton. The parish was the birthplace in 1583 of the Rev. Alexander Henderson, who represented the Scottish Church at the Westminster Assembly in 1643, but died in Edinburgh, 19 Aug. 1646: here also was born in 1652 John Sage, educated at St. Andrews, and consecrated in 1705 as the first of the post-revolution bishops in the Scottish Episcopal communion; he was the author of a remarkable production, the "Fundamental Charter of Presbytery," and other works, and died 7 June, 1711. The surface of the parish is undulating, and the soil sandy and thin. James Carnegie esq. J.P. of Carphin House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,331 acres; rateable value, £2,636; population in 1891, 325, and in 1901, 297.

Brunton and Luthrie are hamlets in this parish.

CROSSGATES, see DUNFERMLINE.

CULROSS is a parish on the Firth of Forth, originally included in the county of Perth, though surrounded by Fife, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 23 February, 1891. The parish contains the town of Culross, a royal and parliamentary burgh within the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, 4 miles south-east from Kincardine, 9 south-east from Alloa and 7 west from Dunfermline. There is a station here, to the east of the town, on the Dunfermline and Kincardine section of the North British railway. The burgh is situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running north from the shore. An extensive traffic in salt and coal was at one time carried on here, and 170 foreign vessels have been at one time in the roads. Culross was erected into a royal burgh by James VI. in 1588, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, treasurer and five councillors. Together with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, it forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. This place affords a peerage title to the Colvill family, Barons Colvill of Culross. The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1217 a monastery of the Cistercian order was founded here on rising ground behind the town by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable portions of the building are still extant; of the church, which stood on the north side, the Early English choir, transepts and Decorated central tower remain, and since 1905 have been restored at a cost of over £5,000, under the direction of Sir R. Rowand Anderson kt. LL.D. architect, and fitted for divine service. In a chapel, erected in 1642 in honour of Sir George Bruce kt. who died 6 May, 1625, are recumbent effigies in white marble of Sir George and his lady, and figures of their eight children in a kneeling posture. To the west of the town, on the bank of the Forth, are the ruins of Dunmarle (the hill near the sea), an ancient stronghold of the Macduffs, and according to tradition the scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children. The present house of Dunmarle, occupied by the Rev. W. Bruce B.D. is a modern castellated edifice, built by the late Mrs. Sharp Erskine, who also erected in the grounds a beautiful mortuary chapel, within which she is interred; the house contains some beautiful paintings, rare old china and other articles of vertu, to which, and the extensive grounds, the public are admitted on certain days of the week. Culross Abbey House is a seat of the Earl of Elgin K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C. Near the abbey church was a school endowed by the late Patrick Geddes esq.; a new building was erected by the late Miss Davidson, of The Park, at a cost of £1,600, and in 1896 this was enlarged, and is now combined with the public school, under the style of the Geddes Public School, which is available for 250 children. Lord Balfour of Burleigh K.T., P.C. of Kinnel House; Robert Hoyer Miller esq. J.P. of Blair Castle; the trustees of the late Mrs. Magdalene Sharp Erskine, of Dunmarle; the Hon. Sir James Siewright K.C.M.G. of Tulliallan; Lawrence Johnston esq. of Sands; Robert W. P. C. Campbell Preston esq. Valleyfield; John James Dalgleish esq. D.L., J.P. of Brankston Grange, and the Earl of Elgin K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., P.C. are the principal landowners of the parish. The area comprises 7,591 acres; rateable value, landward £6,700, burghal £1,710; the population in 1901 was 1,120 and in 1871, 1,096. The population of the royal burgh in 1901 was 348.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 67.

CULTS is a parish, having its kirktown 2½ miles east of Ladybank, which is the nearest railway station, and is a junction on the North British line; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 2 wide, and is bounded north by Cupar and Monimail, east by Ceres, south by Kettle and Leven, and west by Kettle and Collesie; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and contains the village of Pitlessie. It abounds in coal, lime and freestone, and is generally well cultivated and enclosed. The name of the parish is derived from the Gaelic "coillte," which signifies "the woods." Sir David Wilkie R.A. the celebrated artist, was born here 18 Nov. 1785, his father having been minister of Cults for over 30 years. The annual fair is held on 23rd May. The Sir David Wilkie Memorial Hall was opened in 1898, and is used for public meetings. The Hon. Thomas H. A. Cochrane M.P. of Crawford Priory, and the trustees of the late James Martin, of Priestfield, are the sole landowners. The area comprises 2,811 acres; rateable value, £8,335; population in 1891, 700, and in 1901, 628 civil and 593 ecclesiastical.

Pitlessie is a small village in this parish, 2 miles north-east from Kettle, on the road between Kirkcaldy and Cupar, 4 south-south-west from the latter town, and about 2 east from Ladybank station. There is a public school here which serves for the whole of the parish. The population in 1901 was 347.

Post & Telegraph Office, Pitlessie; Thos. Robertson, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Ladybank, which is also the nearest money order office, 2½ miles distant. Deliveries, 8.35 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; dispatches, 6 a.m. & 4.5 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters

CUPAR,

WITH THE VILLAGE AND HAMLET OF CUPAR MUIR.

CUPAR, a royal and parliamentary burgh and parish and the capital of the county of Fife, is 32 miles north (by rail via Forth Bridge) from Edinburgh, 12½ south from Dundee, 9 west from St. Andrews and 9 north-east from Falkland, situated on the left bank of the Eden, and with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee branch of the North British railway. As a royal burgh Cupar is governed by a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, with a treasurer and 6 councillors. The ordinary sheriff court and the sheriff small debt courts are held every Thursday during the session. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but in the present day its aspect is that of a modern town, nor are there any ancient remains to be discerned in or about Cupar. Of its castle, so frequently alluded to in Scottish history, not a vestige is now visible; the Castle hill, where that fortress once stood, and in which the plays of Sir David Lindsay and the "Satire of the Three Estates" were acted in 1555, is now the site of a public school. The principal streets of the town are the Crossgate, the Bonnygate and St. Catherine street, which last is built on the plan of the houses in Edinburgh. The burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by a company established in 1830. The places of worship are the old parish church in Kirkgate, the parish church of St. Michael, in Westport, three United Free churches, Episcopal, Baptist and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. James, in St. Catherine street, an edifice in the Classic style, occupies the site of a convent of Dominican or Black Friars. The Town Hall is in St. Catherine street and the County buildings are also in the town. On the south side of the river is the old prison, now used as a private warehouse; the later gaol, built on rising ground, a little to the north of the Dundee road, is now used as stores and a depot for the Fife Militia Artillery. The principal trade of Cupar arises from the linen manufacture, but tanning, coach building and other vocations are carried on. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, together with a savings bank. Three newspapers are published in Cupar, the "Fife Herald and Journal," the "Fife News" and the "St. Andrews Citizen." The Duncan Institute, in Crossgate, founded by the late Miss Duncan, of Edengrove, for the benefit chiefly of the working classes, comprises a reading room, library, recreation and billiard room and lecture hall, and is managed by trustees. Near the station is a stone statue erected to the memory of David Maitland McGill Crichton, a prominent county gentleman, who took a leading part in the disruption of the Free Church in 1843. The Cupar Bell-Baxter school, an endowed secondary school, with a primary department, was endowed in the year 1832 by the famous educationalist, Dr. Bell, and received a second endowment in 1873 from Sir David Baxter bart. of Kilmarnock. It is governed by a body of eleven persons. The Adamson Cottage Hospital, opened in Dec. 1904, is maintained by the Adamson Trust Funds and public subscriptions. It is managed by the trustees of the late Alexander Adamson, and contains two public wards with three beds each, and one private ward. Cupar is the head quarters of the Fife Royal Garrison Artillery (Militia), the Fifeshire and Forfarshire Imperial Yeomanry and the A Squadron of the Regiment, and of K Co. 6th (Fifeshire) Volunteer Battalion the Black Watch (Royal Highlanders). Kilmarnock Castle is the property and residence of Sir James Low kt. D.L., J.P. James Carnegie esq. D.L. of Aytoun, and James Home Rigg esq. of Tarvit, are the principal landowners. The weekly market for corn is held on Tuesday, and a cattle market on Tuesday once a month. The area comprises 5,737 acres; rateable value, £41,225 13s.; the population in 1891, 6,990 and in 1901, 6,768, including 451 in the burgh. Included in the total population was 81 officials and 533 inmates of Fife and Kinross District Asylum. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1905 was 803. The villages of Springfield and Cupar Muir are in this parish. The population of Springfield in 1901 was 785.

Brighton is a village 1½ miles to the south-west.

DAIRSIE is a parish and village, the latter being 3 miles north-east from Cupar, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 2 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Leuchars and Logie, and on the south by Kemback. east by Leuchars, and west by Cupar, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar. The river Eden, which skirts the parish, is crossed by a good bridge of three arches, supposed to have been erected by John Spottiswood, archbishop of St. Andrew's 1615-61, who was the proprietor of the Dairsie estate. The church was erected in 1626 by the same archbishop, at the time when he designed to establish Episcopacy in Scotland; there is also a United Free church. At Dairsie Castle, now a ruin, a parliament was convened in the year 1335. The Pitcairn Institute, Library and Recreation Rooms, opened in 1897, were built and furnished at a cost of about £900. The late Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitcaills, left the interest of £2,000 to be expended annually in part in the purchase of books, and in the maintenance of the recreation park. James Oheape esq. D.L. of Strathgrym, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,555 acres; rateable value, £5,527; population in 1891, 606, and in 1901, 464.

Post, T. M. O., S. B. & I. & A. Office; Edward Smith, postmaster (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added. Delivery, 8.40 a.m.; dispatch, 1.10 & 4 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters

DALGETTY is a parish in the parliamentary division of West Fife and the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, about 1½ miles from Inverkeithing station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway; it extends 5 miles from north to south, by from 1 to 3 broad, and is bounded on the north by Beath, north-west by Dunfermline, west by Inverkeithing, south by the Forth and east by Aberdeen. The Park of Donbristie, which includes the site of Dalgetty House and the fine gardens formerly attached to it, stands partly in this parish and partly in Aberdeen; the house, which is a seat of the Earl of Moray, is in this parish, as are also the ruins of Couston Castle on an island in Manton Loch, and Fordell Castle and Otterston House, the seat of the Henderson family: the castle, erected in the 12th century, was restored about 1850, but is only occasionally used: it possesses a fine banquetting hall. Dalgetty old church is roofless, but the walls are standing, and there are many monuments in the church and yard; in a vault at the west end of the church lie the remains of Alexander Seton, high chancellor of Scotland, and created, in 1606, Earl of Dunfermline. In 1622: above it is a fine stone-pannelled room, open on the east side to the church, and once serving as a pew for the Earls of Dunfermline, a title which became extinct on the outlawry of the 4th Earl in 1690: the new church is about a quarter of a mile further north, and was built about 1830. Fordell is a village in this parish, about a mile south-east of Crossgates railway station. It has a fine reading room, provided for the use of the workmen. Population in 1901, 463.

Saint David's is a small port in this parish, about a mile and a half to the east of Inverkeithing. The rise of this place can be mainly ascribed to the advantages it affords for the shipment of coal, brought from the extensive collieries at Fordell by means of a private railway five miles in length. At the pier here, which has been extended at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, upwards of 500 tons of coal can be shipped daily; and there is an average depth of 18 feet at high water, being greater than that of any other port on this part of the coast, admitting vessels of upwards of 600 tons to receive their cargoes at the pier. The nearest railway station is Inverkeithing, a mile and a half distant. The northern part of the parish is rich in coal, of which great quantities are exported from St. David's. Fordell House is a seat of the Earl of Buckinghamshire. The Earl of Moray, Major W. Mowbray and the trustees of the late George W. Mercer Henderson esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,340 acres; rateable value, £. . . population in 1891, 1,341, and in 1901, 1,133 civil and 307 ecclesiastical.

DUNBOG is a parish extending along the southern shore of the Firth of Tay for about 1 mile, and running inland in a southerly direction for 4 miles; the parish is 6 miles north-west from Cupar. The nearest station is Newburgh, on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway, 4 miles distant. The parish is bounded south by Monimail, north and north-east by Flisk and Creich and west by Abdie. It consists of a valley lying between two ridges of the Ochil Hills. Aytoun Hill is the residence of Lieut.-Col. William C. Middleton. The soil is of a rich black mould, which produces abundant crops of every description. The area comprises 2,324 acres; rateable value, £3,042; the population in 1891, 298, and in 1901, 286 in the civil parish and 323 in the ecclesiastical parish, including part of Flisk parish for ecclesiastical, school and registration purposes. DUNFERMLINE.

DUNFERMLINE is a parish, city and royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and small debt court district and the chief town in the western part of Fifeshire. It is 16 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 47 north-east from Glasgow, 31 south-south-west from Cupar, 14 east from Alloa, 21 south-by-east from Stirling, 15 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 6 north from North Queensferry, and is situate on rising ground, 3 miles north from the Firth of Forth and 300 feet above the level at Limekilns, the nearest part of the coast. Thus elevated, it commands a prospect remarkably varied and beautiful, extending over fourteen different counties, and comprises a fine marine view on the south; its salubrious position making it one of the healthiest cities in Scotland. There is a station here on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway; another line, about 4 miles in length, from this place to Charlestown, is used principally for the conveyance of coal for shipment at that port, but a passenger service of trains has also been established. The West of Fife mineral railway runs from the town north into the rich mineral district, which contains immense quantities of coal, ironstone and limestone, and there is a line to Kincardine and one between Dunfermline and Edinburgh by North Queensferry and across the Forth by means of the Forth Bridge, which was finished in 1890, and opened by His present Majesty, Edward VII. then Prince of Wales, March 4th of that year. Dunfermline Lower is on the main line from Inverness and Perth to Edinburgh, and passengers from Dunfermline can now reach Edinburgh by express trains in less than half an hour. The early history of this city is varied and interesting. Malcolm Canmore, who ascended the Scottish throne in 1057, besides founding the monastery of Dunfermline, built a strong tower on a height in the adjacent glen, from which this place derives its name and dates its existence. The burgh of Dunfermline, it appears, was held of the monastery, which formerly possessed paramount jurisdiction and exclusive privileges here for nearly two centuries, and it became a royal burgh by a charter from James VI. dated 24th May, 1588. In this document the monarch ratifies sundry charters, donations, and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated the 10th of October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce in favour of the aldermen and community the whole income of the burgh belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of courts &c., "reserving, however, the power of punishment, should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office." In 1724 the burgh was placed on the footing it still maintains as respects its government, which is vested in a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, together with a treasurer, a chamberlain, a town clerk, and 15 councillors, elected pursuant to the terms of the Municipal Reform Act. Dunfermline, together with Stirling, Inverkeithing, Culross and South Queensferry, form the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. Dunfermline is also the seat of the sheriff substitute for the western district of Fife, who holds a regular court on the first and third Tuesday of every month during session. Burgh courts are held daily if required in the Corporation buildings. James VI. here subscribed the first covenant, and Charles I. was born in the palace which had been added to the old Royal Tower of Malcolm Canmore, the south-west wall of which still remains: here also Charles II. signed the Dunfermline declaration. In 1873, by a decision of the House of Lords, the ruins, and a portion of the grounds adjoining, were apportioned to the Crown, but admission is granted to the public.

The city consists of streets stretching from east to west, with a number of smaller streets crossing down hill at right angles, or proceeding in a northerly direction, and of late years has been greatly enlarged by the extension of the cross streets and the addition of a large suburb to the west and east. It is well supplied with water, the Corporation having obtained an Act of Parliament in 1876 to ensure a plentiful supply from Glensherrup, the works costing about £70,000. The streets are lighted with gas. There is an efficient fire brigade, with quarters in Campbell street, and fire plugs on the gravitation principle are placed at numerous points throughout the streets and lanes. The sewage of the city is conveyed by means of pipes to the sea at Charlestown, a distance of three miles. The plans were prepared by Mr. J. L. Stewart C.E. Edinburgh, and the cost of the undertaking was about £7,000.

The constantly increasing population and prosperity of Dunfermline may be entirely ascribed to its manufacture of table linens and damask goods. This branch of industry was started about the commencement of last century, and is carried on here to a greater extent than in any other town in Great Britain, many firms being engaged in this business. There are several large factories where power-loom weaving is carried on. It is said that the chest of the Incorporation of Weavers contains two curious specimens of their art—a man's shirt and a woman's shift, both wrought in the loom without seam, and without the assistance of a needle. Here are also large fire-clay works, the Bourtrees Hill Coal Co. Limited, Lochhead and the Fife Coal Co. Limited, at Crossgates, as well as iron and brass foundries and engineering works. The coal trade in the neighbourhood is very extensive, and large quantities are annually exported. About 4,000 men are employed in connection with the collieries. Six branch banks are established here, in addition to a Savings Bank, for which a fine building has been erected in East Port street, at a cost of £3,000. There are four newspapers, namely, the "Dunfermline Press," the "Dunfermline Journal" (published on Saturday), the "Dunfermline Citizen" (on Wednesday) and the "Dunfermline Express" (on Tuesday).

The public park, at the east end of the town, extends over between 30 and 40 acres, is finely laid out and planted with trees, and has a polished granite fountain, given by the late Provost Donald, and a band-stand with a gilt dome, the gift of Mrs. Carnegie. The park, on a clear day, commands a fine view of Edinburgh and the Firth of Forth.

The Town House, in Kirkgate, on the site of the Old Town House, was begun in 1875 and finished in 1879, at a cost of about £20,000. The building, which presents a combination of the French and Scotch Gothic styles, is from a design by Mr. J. C. Walker, Edinburgh, and has two frontages, and at the north-east angle is a tower, 150 feet, containing a clock with four illuminated dials, and striking the hours on a bell, weighing 33 cwt. The exterior is adorned with carvings of the royal Scottish and burgh arms, and has also canopied niches with busts representing Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret and King Robert the Bruce and Elizabeth, his second queen, all of whom are buried in the abbey. On the Kirkgate front are eight carved stone panels from the old Town House, some of which are said to have originally belonged to the old market cross of 1620. The interior of the building includes a burgh court room and a council chamber, and offices for the town clerk and other officials of the burgh. The County buildings, on the south side of the High street, are in the Classic style, and include a tower with spire 132 feet; they contain a sheriff court room, justice of peace court room, and a suite of rooms for the sheriff, sheriff clerk, procurator fiscal and other county officials. In 1903, Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, Dornoch, presented Dunfermline with Pittencrieff Park and Glen, and with 2,400,000 dollars in 5 per cent. bonds, which y.e.d an annual income of £25,000; the trustees, in addition to laying out the park and glen and providing entertainments, have established a college of hygiene and physical training, a gymnasium, baths, a school of music, and libraries and recreation rooms, and a school of textile industries is now (1907) being erected; the Trust is administered by 25 trustees, 16 nominated by the founder for life or until resignation, 6 by the Town Council (annually) and 3 by the School Board triennially. The Post Office, a building in Queen Anne street, stands on the site of the old High school. The Carnegie Public Baths, in Bath street, were erected in 1875 by a gift of £5,000 from Andrew Carnegie esq. L.L.D. of Skibo Castle and a native of Dunfermline, from designs prepared by Mr. Andrew Scobie, architect, of Dunfermline. New baths and a gymnasium were erected in 1905 in Pilmuir street, at a cost of about £35,000, given by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, from designs by Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, architect, of Edinburgh. The memorial stone was laid by Mrs. Carnegie, on the 16th July, 1902. The Carnegie Free Library, in St. Margaret and Abbot streets, was erected in 1881-3, at a cost of £8,000, also given by Mr. A. Carnegie, and is a building in the domestic Tudor style, from plans prepared by Mr. J. C. Walker, architect, of Edinburgh. The library comprises 19,000 volumes, and there are reading rooms for ladies and gentlemen, recreation and smoke rooms and lavatories. The memorial stone was laid July 27th, 1881, and the building was opened by the Earl of Rosebery, August 29th, 1883. The library system is being organised by the Carnegie Dunfermline Trust. In accordance with the provisions of the Public Libraries Act the library is managed by a committee, and at Townhill, a neighbouring village, is a branch library of 2,000 volumes, opened in 1906, and reading, recreation and billiard rooms and during the summer outdoor recreation is provided. St. Margaret's Hall, in St. Margaret street, was begun in 1876, and completed in 1878, at a cost of about £12,000, from plans prepared by Mr. Starforth, Edinburgh; the style is an adaptation of Early English, and the building contains a large hall, seating 1,600 persons, another seating 300, and several committee and board rooms. In the large hall is a splendid organ, purchased and presented by the ladies of the town and district at a cost of over £1,300. The building belongs to the St. Margaret's Hall Company Limited. The principal hotels are the City Arms, in Bridge street and the Royal, in High street. The Cottage Hospital, in Nethertown Broad street, containing 20 beds, was erected at a cost of about £4,500, and opened on September 1st, 1894; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions; the hospital was enlarged in 1903, and has 54 beds. The West Fife Joint Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated at the west end of the town, was opened on November 1st, 1894, and is maintained by the Dunfermline committee of the West of Fife County Council, and local authorities of the burghs of Dunfermline, Inverkeithing, Culross and Cowdenbeath, and contains 55 beds.

The Abbey, the church of which is now the Parish Kirk of the burgh, was founded as a Priory of Benedictines on the site of a Culdee cell in 1080 by Malcolm Canmore, who was buried in the church in 1093; there must have been a church here previous to 1080, as King Malcolm is said to have been married at Dunfermline in 1070 to Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling; in 1124 it was created an abbey, and in 1224 the abbot received the mitre, but in 1304 most of the abbey buildings were burnt by order of King Edward I. At the Reformation in 1560, the remaining buildings and church, except the nave, which the "New Religion" reserved for their own parish kirk, were destroyed, and only this nave remained until 1821, when a new parish kirk, consisting of chancel, transept and a central tower, 100 feet in height, was added to the east of the nave: the west doorway of the old church, between the two western towers, is Norman, and above it is a fine Decorated window; the Norman nave is of eight bays, with a north porch containing a rich Norman doorway; the transept, central tower and choir composing the present church, are in a modern Gothic style, and beneath the tower the remains of King Robert Bruce have been re-interred; the nave contains 17 other royal tombs, besides those of the Regents, Thomas, Earl of Moray, and Robert, Duke of Albany: on the south side of the church are some remains of the refectory and cells. The tower has the words "King Robert Bruce" in massive stone letters, four feet high, round the four sides at the summit. The parish church has been collegiate and under the care of two ministers since 1645.

The Grammar School, instituted towards the end of the 15th century, was, in 1873, by the operation of "The Education (Scotland) Act, 1872," transferred to the burgh School Board, the interest of the original sum of £2,000, which belonged to the school, being made over annually to that body. In 1877 the board, with the approval of the Board of Education, converted the school into one for the imparting of higher or secondary education. The present building was erected in Buchanan street at a cost of £7,500, and the school transferred to it in January, 1886. Adjoining is an annexe for Technical Instruction, erected in 1899 by the munificence of Mr. Carnegie, at a cost of £10,000. The board have also erected a school in the west end of the town at a cost of £4,136, and a central school has been substituted for the Rolland and Commercial schools, at a cost of £5,143. A new infants' department was built in 1895 at an estimated cost of £2,800. There is also a school originally erected in connection with St. Leonard's steam power weaving factory, but which the board purchased at a cost of £1,200. Altogether there are seven schools under the control of the board, while a supervision is exercised over three other educational institutions. Broomhall, the seat of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine K.G., G.C.S.I., G.O.I.E., P.C. and Pittfrane House, the seat of Lady Halkett, are in this parish. The market is held on Tuesday for grain, which is disposed of by stock and sample. The entire parish of Dunfermline comprises 21,042 statute acres; rental value of burgh, £112,261; rateable value of burgh estimated at £89,900; landward, £47,288; the population in 1891 was 28,948 in the parish, and in 1901 was 31,697, including 25,250 in the royal burgh, or 22,039 in the parliamentary burgh. Included in the total population was 3 officials and 102 inmates in the combination poorhouse.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 3,835.

Crossford, Halbeath, Townhill, Wellwood, Kingseat and Miles Mark are small villages and hamlets in this parish, and in the parliamentary division of West Fife, from one to three miles distant from Dunfermline. At Halbeath is a board school. At Townhill are collieries, fire-clay works, and a board school. At Wellwood are the collieries of Messrs. Thomas Spowart and Co. Limited, and a school. At Miles Mark a school has been built by the joint aid of the parish and burgh School Boards, at a cost of £3,000, for 400 children. Population in 1901: Crossford, 540; Halbeath, 1,002; Townhill, 2,274; Wellwood, 730; Kingseat, 738; and Miles Mark and Park Nook, 450.

Crossgates is a village partly in the parish of Dalgety and partly in this parish, 4 miles east-north-east from Dunfermline and 4 north from Inverkeithing, with a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries surrounding the village. There are established and United Free Presbyterian churches and a Board school. Population in 1891, 1,165, and in 1901, 1,771, of which 443 are in Dalgety parish.

DUNINO (or Denino) is a parish, 4½ miles south-east of St. Andrews and 5 north-west of Craill, with a station at Stravithie, 1½ miles north, on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, extends 3 miles from north to south by 2 broad, and is bounded north by St. Andrews and St. Leonard, east by Craill, south by Carnbee and west by Cameron. The parish church, a plain stone building, was erected in 1826. Col. Alexander Sprot of Stravithie, the representative of Col. Sir Alexander Moncrieff K.C.B., F.R.S. of Bandirran, Perthshire, the trustees of the late Walter Irvine esq. of Grangemuir and Col. Alexander B. Purvis R.A. of Kinaldy in Cameron, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,966 acres; rateable value, £3,104; the population in 1891, 277, and in 1901, 272.

Post Office, Denino, or Dunino; Mrs. Isabella Duff, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive through Stravithie S.O. Delivery, 9.30 a.m. & 7.5 p.m.; dispatched, 1.50 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at St. Andrews, 5 miles distant

DYSART is a seaport and parish, extending 3 miles from north to south and lying along the north shore of the Firth of Forth for about 2 miles east to west; it contains the royal and parliamentary burgh and seaport of Dysart, and is in the Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination, with a station on the Perth and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish was amalgamated with that of Kirkcaldy, Dec. 3rd, 1901, and is bounded on the north by Kingliss, east by Wemyss and Markinch and west by Kirkcaldy burgh, and is within the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy. Dysart town is 2 miles north-west from Kirkcaldy, on a gentle declivity towards the Fifth of Forth. The central street contains many substantial houses, and has a very ancient appearance. The streets are lighted with gas supplied by a company formed in 1843. So early as 1546 Dysart is mentioned as one of the principal trading towns on the coast of Fife. The trade now consists in the weaving of ticks, checks and similar linen fabrics, also woollens, tweeds, druggets and wineys. There are besides powerloom factories in the burgh, besides two flax spinning mills, and in the vicinity are mines of coal, extensively wrought. The harbour is very good, and there is an excellent wet dock with about 18 feet of water. Coal is the principal export. Dysart was created a royal burgh in the 15th century, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and, together with Kirkcaldy, Kinghorn and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The most remarkable object of antiquity near the town is the castle of Ravenscraig, which stands on a steep crag, fronting the sea, within the burgh of Kirkcaldy; this castle is alluded to in Sir Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel", under the name of Ravensheugh. It was inhabited in the time of the Commonwealth, and was assaulted by the Parliamentary troops, but has for many years been deserted, and is now ruinous. Dysart gives the title of earl to a branch of the Murrays of Tullibardine. There is an Established church, and two United Free churches. The Normand Memorial Hall, a building of stone, was erected at a cost of between £5,000 and £6,000, and presented to the town by Mrs. James Normand, in memory of her deceased husband. There is also a Mechanics' Institute, Masonic Hall, and Police and Coastguard stations, and near the town is a golf course of 9 holes. Dysart House, formerly the residence of the Earls of Dysart, is the seat of Sir Michael B. Nairn bart. J.P. The area of the burgh is 238 acres; rateable value (including part of Kirkcaldy), £68,090; the population in 1901 was 16,019, including 3,539 in the royal burgh of Dysart and 11,733 in the royal burgh of Kirkcaldy; the population of the parish in 1891 was 13,626, of whom 3,022 were in Dysart burgh.

The number of electors in the parliamentary register in 1907 was 2,898.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. & Telephone Call Office, 52 High street; Miss Agnes Buist, postmistress (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added). Deliveries, 8.25 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; dispatches, 6.40 a.m. & 1.4.45, 5.10 & 7.10 p.m.

EARLSFERRY, a royal burgh, formerly in the parish of Kilconquhar, but transferred on 15th May, 1891, to that of Elie, lies at the head of Elie bay, in the civil parish of that name, which adjoins Earlsferry and is the nearest railway station and telegraph office. Elie possessing the harbour. The royal burgh, which is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, is 13 miles south-east from St. Andrews and 5 east from Largo, and remains in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilconquhar. The date of its erection into a royal burgh is uncertain, as its earliest charter was destroyed by a fire in Edinburgh. A new one was granted by James IV. (1488-1513), by which all its ancient privileges were renewed and confirmed; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The chief industry here is the manufacture of golf clubs and balls; but many of the inhabitants obtain a living by the letting of furnished houses through the summer. The National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches at Elie. Earlsferry has in recent years been extensively rebuilt, owing to its great popularity as a summer resort; it has an excellent beach, well adapted for sea bathing on the south and west sides, and there are golf links on the north. The area is 47 acres; value of the burgh is £3,298 gross rental; population in 1891, 304, and in 1901, 317.

Post, M. O., S. B. & A. & I. Office; Robert Cumming, postmaster. Letters received through Elie S.O. Fifeshire, which is the nearest telegraph office. Dispatched at 11.15 a.m. & 3.15, 6.15 & 9.30 p.m.; Saturdays, 8.45 p.m.; Sundays, 9.30 p.m. only

EASTER FERNIE, see MONIMAIL.

ELIE is a parish and police burgh and seaport, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish of Elie extends 3½ miles along the north shore of the Firth of Forth by about 1½ inland, and is in the Anstruther small debt court district; in 1892, under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1890," it was added to the royal burgh of Earlsferry, of which town Elie is really a suburb; the parish boundaries are St. Monance on the east, Kilconquhar on the north and Newburn on the west. The burgh is situated on the north-east part of Elie bay, 14 miles south-east from St. Andrews, 32 north-east from Edinburgh and 5 east from Largo, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a small well-sheltered harbour but no docks. The trade of the district consists in the export of potatoes. There are Established and United Free churches. The National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have each a branch here. There are golf links both for ladies and gentlemen, and a good beach, and, in conjunction with Earlsferry, this place is a favourite summer resort. In one of the streets near the sea are several ancient and substantial residences, evidently once occupied by families of distinction. At the lower end of the parish, close to the sea coast, is the hill of Kincaira, which rises to a height of 200ft. above the level of the sea, and its rocky slopes contain several large caves. Elie House, the residence of William Baird esq. D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion of stone standing in good grounds. William Baird esq. of Elie House, Dame Malcolm, of Balbednie and Grange, and Miss Gourlay are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,020 acres; ratable value for the burgh, £8,449, and landward, £3,526; population of the parish in 1881, 670; and in 1901, 1,142, including 687 in the police burgh of Elie, and 317 in Earlsferry burgh.

Post, M. O., T. O., S. B. & A. & I. O. & Telephonic E. D. Office; Mrs. Janet Ovenston, postmistress (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added to them). Deliveries, 7 & 9.15 a.m. & 7.15 p.m.; dispatches, 7 & 11.30 a.m. & 3.30, 6.40 & (Saturdays only) 9.10 p.m.

Williamsburgh and Liberty are small hamlets in the parish and form part of the police burgh.

FALKLAND is a royal burgh and
 parish, with a station on the Thornton,
 Ladybank and Dundee section of the North
 British railway, 2½ miles east of the burgh,
 and known as Falkland road. The burgh lies 25 miles north from Edinburgh, 15
 south-east from Perth and 10 south-west
 from Cupar. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty
 extends 6 miles from east to west by 4
 broad, and is bounded north by Auchtermuchty,
 west by Strathmiglo, south by Leslie and Markinch, and east by Kettle.
 The town was erected into a burgh by James II. in 1468, and its charter was confirmed and renewed by James VI. in 1595.
 The government consists of a provost, two
 bailies, a treasurer, a town clerk and nine councillors. Falkland consists principally of one street, the eastern part of which is
 broad and spacious, but towards the west
 is narrow. The few good houses are of an antique character, somewhat in keeping with the architecture of the palace, a building for a long time only a ruin, but rescued from total decay and repaired by the late Mr. Bruce of Nuthill, and since 1895 restored at the expense of the late Marquis of Bute K.T. The royal family of Scotland resided here occasionally up to the time of Charles II., who called here on his return from the continent in 1650.
 James V. died here in 1542. In the old castle of Falkland, David Stewart, Duke
 of Rothesay, eldest son of Robert III.
 was confined, and here he died, 27 March, 1402. Sir Walter Scott, in his "Fair Maid of Perth," wove in the traditional story. In 1715, it is said, the famous Rob Roy garrisoned the palace with a party of Macgregors, and laid the country under heavy contributions. The house in which Richard Cameron, the Covenanter, was born is still standing. The manufacture of linen and floorcloth is carried on here.
 A town hall was erected in 1804, in which
 balls and other public assemblages take place. A large common, which belongs to Falkland, and on which the inhabitants
 had a right to turn their cattle &c. was
 in 1818 divided among the heritors, and is now nearly all enclosed. The parish church, erected by the late O. T. Bruce
 esq. at an expense of £7,000, is a fine
 structure, with a tower and spire; a monument to Mr. Bruce has been erected on Black Hill, near the Lomonds, and in
 the square behind the palace is a memorial to Col. Robert Bruce, and John Bruce,
 king's printer for Scotland. The House
 of Falkland, erected by the late Mr.
 Bruce, and one of the finest mansions in
 the county, is now, with the estates, the property of Lord Ninian Edward Crichton-Stuart. The Lomond hills in this district
 are cone-shaped; the eastern Lomond,
 which is the most regular and beautiful,
 is about 1,335 feet above the level of the sea, and appears to have been fortified.
 The western Lomond is 1,450 feet, and
 has on its top a large cairn. Lord Ninian
 Edward Crichton-Stuart, of Falkland,
 Charles J. Maitland Mackgill-Crichton, of Lathrisk, and Edwd. Balfour esq. D.L. J.P.
 of Balbirnie, are the principal landowners.
 The area comprises 8,179 acres; rateable
 value of parishes, £11,379; of burgh, £3,110; population in 1891 was 2,470, and
 in 1901, 2,231, including 809 in the royal burgh.
 Freuchie is a village in this parish. The manufacture of linen is carried on here,
 and there are United Free and quoad sacra
 churches. There is also a public school.
 Falkland Road is the nearest railway station, one mile distant. Population in 1891, 1913, and 1901, 827.

Newton of Falkland is a hamlet about
 midway between Falkland and Freuchie,
 where there is an extensive trade carried on in brewing. Falkland road is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

TAYPORT.

FLISK is a parish on the south shore of
 the Tay, its kirktown being 9 miles west
 from Newport and 6 east from Newburgh
 and 5 west from Wormit station on the North British railway; it is bounded on the west and south by Dunbog, south-east
 by Creich and east by Balmerino, and is in the small debt court district of Newburgh. There is an Established church
 here, and a United Free church at Brun-
 ton. The land is almost wholly arable.
 There are several salmon fishing stations
 along the banks of the Tay. At the west end of the parish are the extensive ruins
 of Birlinbreich, once the seat of the Earls
 of Rothes, some of whom are interred in the parish churchyard. The Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. and James Carnegie
 esq. D.L. of Aytoun Hill, Newburgh, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,697 acres; rateable value, £3,281;
 the population in 1891 was 248, and in 1901, 232 civil and 195 ecclesiastical.
 Glenduckie is a hamlet in this parish.

FORGAN parish extends for about 5
 miles in length and about 2½ in breadth,
 along the south bank of the Firth of Tay,
 exactly opposite the town of Dundee. It is bounded by Ferry-Port-on-Craig on the east, Balmerino on the west, Kilmany and Logie on the south-west and Leuchars on
 the south, and is in the small debt court
 district of Coupar. It contains the town of Newport, which has three stations (East and West Newport and Wormit) on the North British railway. A little north of Wormit station is the Tay railway
 bridge, connecting the southern lines with Dundee. The parish church of Forgan is nearly two miles inland, being 9½ miles
 north-east from Cupar and the same distance north-west from St. Andrews. The landward part of the parish is richly wooded and well cultivated. The mansion house of St. Fort, in this parish, is occupied by Reginald M. Pilkington esq.,
 and about 1 mile west from Newport is
 the small harbour of Woodhaven, off which
 the industrial ship "Mars" is moored.
 The area comprises 4,983 acres; rateable
 value £37,456; the population in 1891 was 3,763, and in 1901, 4,720, being burgh,
 2,869, landward, 1,436, including training
 ship "Mars," 415.

INVERKEITHING is a burgh and parish and seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline. The town is a royal and parliamentary burgh, with a station on the main line of the North British railway, the Forth railway bridge terminating at North Queensferry in this parish. The burgh is 11 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 13 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 4 south-east from Dunfermline, and occupies a slight hill sloping up from the north-west side of Inverkeithing Bay, commanding an extensive view of the south side of the Forth. The parish extends 6 miles from north to south by 5 miles broad; the outlying portion having been transferred by Boundary Order 67 to Dunfermline, by which it is bounded on the north-west and on the north-east by Dalgety. This burgh, together with Stirling, Culross, Dunfermline and South Queensferry, forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. So early as the days of David I. Inverkeithing was a royal residence, and received a charter of confirmation in the reign of William the Lion, confirming charters of earlier but unknown dates; a number of intervening charters were confirmed by one from James VI., in 1598. The government is vested in a provost, or sheriff, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer, elected by the councillors. The trade of the burgh consists of fire-clay works, paper mills, tanning and ship-building; connected with the latter branch is a patent slip, of great use in repairing vessels. Freestone and Whinstone are abundant in this neighbourhood, and of excellent quality, and considerable quantities of each are annually exported. The harbour is capacious, and the bay is noted as a place of security in all winds. The private harbour of East Ness affords additional accommodation, and has about 18 feet of water at spring tides. The town consists chiefly of two streets, which are lighted by gas; the town house comprises a gaol and apartments for the courts. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, is established here. There are many remains of antiquity, some of which are coeval with the earliest periods of Scottish history. Among these is the "Inns," or old Palace, which is said to have been the residence of Annabella Drummond, Queen of Robert III., who died at Inverkeithing in 1401. This Queen is supposed to have presented the burgh with its cross, on the occasion of the marriage of her son, Duke of Rothesay, in 1400, with Mary, daughter of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas; the top of the cross is adorned with shields charged with the royal arms of that Queen and the Earl of Douglas. On the island of Inchgarvie, just below the Forth bridge, is a fort, for many years in a ruinous condition, but which has now (1907) been reconstructed by the War Office, and mounted with two quick-firing guns. Here are established and United Free churches, and a Baptist church. The parish church contains a beautiful font, said to have been the gift of Queen Annabella, and discovered in 1806, when the church was undergoing a series of repairs. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Peter is attached to Holy Trinity, Dunfermline, and affords 64 sittings. There is a large public school under the School Board. A fair is held on the first Friday in August. The Earl of Elgin K.G., P.C., G.C.S.I.,

G.C.I.E. the Admiralty Commissioners and the trustees of the late Hon. Hew A. D. H. Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson, of Fordell (d. 1900), are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,027 acres; rateable value of the burgh in 1907, £ : landward, : the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,943, and in 1901, 3,468, including 1,965 in the burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,912.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 327.

Hillend, James Town and Rosyth are hamlets in the parish of Inverkeithing. At the latter place are the ruins of the old castle of Rosyth, for several centuries the residence of the Stuart family. The rock on which it stands is connected with the mainland by a causeway, and a stone slab, placed in the wall over what appears to have been the principal entrance, bears the date 1561. In Sir Walter Scott's novel of "The Abbot," this castle is alluded to, and tradition points it out as being the birthplace of the mother of Oliver Cromwell. It is now the property of the Admiralty Commissioners.

North Queensferry, in the parish of Inverkeithing, is 2 miles south from Inverkeithing, and is well known to travellers as the port and point of land opposite to Queensferry (or South Queensferry), in Linlithgowshire, and a steamer passes between the two several times daily. Here is a United Free church. The Forth bridge, which carries the North British railway over the Firth of Forth, was opened by His Majesty Edward VII. then Prince of Wales, on the 4th of March, 1890, the cost of its erection being about £3,000,000. Two of the spans of this gigantic undertaking are 1,710 feet in length, and have a height of 150 feet above high water at spring tides. There are two other spans of 680 feet, fifteen of 168 feet, four of 57 feet and three of 25 feet each; the total length with the viaduct approaches is a mile and a half (for full particulars see Queensferry, Linlithgowshire). By its erection the direct journey north can be taken without break; as formerly passengers had to cross the Forth by ferry from Granton to Burntisland. A short distance to the west of the village is the anchorage ground, resorted to by vessels in stress of weather or contrary winds, called "Saint Margaret's Hope," the site of the proposed Forth Naval base, for which the Admiralty have acquired considerable land. Here is a coastguard station, and a fishing ground for a kind of sprat, of which quantities are taken. There are also large whinstone quarries, employing a number of men. Population in 1901, 594.

KETTLE is a parish, including the village of Kingskettle, which is situated 4 miles east from Falkland and 17 south from Dundee, with a station, called Kingskettle, on the main line of the North British railway. The parish extends about 9 miles east to west by 3 broad; is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and is bounded north by Collasie and Cults, east by Largo, south by Kennoway and Markinch, and west by Falkland. The name of Kingskettle, by which the village is now called, has arisen from its being the property of the Crown. There are Established and United Free churches. This district forms a large portion of the rich and beautiful territory on the north side of the Bow of Fife. The river Eden bounds the parish on nearly the whole of the northern side. The manufacture of linen is the principal trade carried on here. A fire engine is maintained here by public subscription; the brigade consists of a captain and seven firemen. The cemetery, opened in 1896, is under the management of the parish council, and contains a beautiful marble monument, erected by H. V. Haig esq. of Ramornie, to the memory of his wife, Archie Anne Lindsay Fraser. C. J. M. Orichton esq. of Latbrisk, Edward Balfour esq. J.L., J.P. of Balbirnie, Oliver Haig esq. D.P. of Ramornie, and Alexander Lawson esq. of Annfield, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,612 acres; rateable value, £10,482; the population in 1891, 1,939, and in 1901 was 1,759 in the parish and 455 in the village.

Kettlebridge is a village in this parish, about one mile south of the church, and about half a mile from the village is the hamlet of Balmaccolm, where there is a United Free church. The population in 1901 was 373.

KILCONQUHAR is a parish and village, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrew's section, of the North British railway, is 4 miles east of Largo and 10 south of St. Andrew's. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and contains the village of Colinsburgh (which see); it extends about 6 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 2 to 3 miles, and is bounded south by Elie, west by Newburn and Largo, north by Ceres and Cameron, and east by Carnbee. Until the 15th May, 1891, the royal burgh of Earlsferry was in Kilconquhar parish, but the Boundary Commissioners then transferred a detached portion of Elie parish (consisting of Muircambus and part of Charlston estates) to Kilconquhar, and in exchange gave to Elie parish all the land formerly belonging to Kilconquhar to the south of Cockle Mill Burn and the North British railway. This area included the burgh of Earlsferry, which now forms part of Elie parish. Coal and lime are found in the parish. The parish church has a fine square tower 80 feet high. Balcarres House, the seat of the Earl of Crawford K.T., V.D. and about one mile north of Colinsburgh, is a mansion in the Tudor style, situated on a southern slope about 3 miles from the sea-coast; Kilconquhar House is the residence of the Earl of Lindsay, and Charleton House, of Col. C. F. St. Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O. Balcarres Craig, near Balcarres House, is a remarkable hill, rising abruptly 200 feet above the level of the land. Kilconquhar Loch is a fine sheet of water, three-quarters of a mile in length and nearly the same in breadth, and about 2 miles in circumference, with two small islands, which harbour swans and wild fowl. The Earl of Crawford and the Earl of Lindsay, Col. C. F. St. Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O. William Baird esq. J.P. of Elie House, and the trustees of the late David Adams esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,633 acres; rateable value, £13,578 (gross). The population in 1891 was 1,746, and in 1901, of the parish, 1,517 including 317 in Earlsferry and of the village, 334.

Post Office; Miss Marjory Mathieson, postmistress (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added). Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 11.5 a.m. & 2.10, 6.15 & 10 p.m. (saturdays only). Nearest money order & telegraph office is at Colinsburgh, 1 mile distant KILMANY is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles north of Cupar, and 5 south-west of Newport. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar, extends 6 miles from north-east to south-west by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles; it is bounded north by Balmerino, north-east by Forgan, east by Logie, south by Cupar and west by Creich. Cupar, on the North British main line, is the nearest railway station for the south of the parish; the nearest station to Kilmanny village is St. Fort, on the same system. There are Established and Free churches. With the exception of a few acres which are chiefly woodland, the entire parish is in a high state of cultivation, being well watered and drained by numerous streams. In 1680, David Hackston, at that time proprietor of the estate of Rathillet and a bigoted leader of the Covenanters, was executed for complicity in the murder of Archbishop Sharpe, of St. Andrews. Mrs. Gillespie, of Mountquhanie and Major William Anstruther-Gray M.P., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,340 acres; rateable value, £6,956; the population in 1891 was 588, and in 1901, 502.

Rathillet is a village in the parish of Kilmanny, about 3 miles from St. Fort railway station.

KILRENNY is a royal and parliamentary burgh, also a parish, and contains the port and village of Cellardyke. The burgh is 1 mile north-east of Anstruther Easter, 3 south-west from Crail, and 8 south-east from St. Andrew's. The nearest station is at Anstruther, on the North British railway. The parish extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, by 2 inland, and is bounded on the west by Anstruther Easter and Carnbee, north by Airdrie and east by Crail; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther. The coast here is one continued range of rocks, with two small creeks, which form the harbour of Anstruther, and the port of Cellardyke, or Nether Kilrenny, while the burgh of Kilrenny is composed of Upper and Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardyke, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six councillors, and in conjunction with St. Andrew's, the two Anstruthers, Crail, Cupar and Pittenweem forms the St. Andrew's district of burghs, and returns one member to Parliament. The Town Hall, which includes council, reading and amusement rooms, was erected and presented to the burgh by Stephen Williamson esq. and the representatives of the late James Fowler esq. The representatives of the late Col. Anstruther, Col. Sir Ffolliott William Erskine bart. of Cambo, David W. Clement esq. of Easter Pitkerrie, Alexander Crabb esq. of Wester Pitkerrie, William Baird esq. of Elbie, David Gibb esq. of Barnsmuir, and James Cairns esq. of Rennyhill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,773 acres; rateable value, burchal, £5,539 and of the parish, including part of Anstruther Easter, £12,791. The population of the entire parish in 1891 was 2,998, and in 1901, 2,950, 2,542 being in the burgh of Kilrenny and 166 in the burgh of Anstruther. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 1,160.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1903 was 475.

The village and quoad sacra parish of Cellardyke (or Nether Kilrenny), is an extensive fishing village, but forming part of the burgh of Kilrenny. There is a small harbour for fishing boats here. Cellardyke is specially noted for its oil clothing, fishing material, and net manufacturing, a considerable number of persons being employed in these industries. Canvas buoys were first made here, A. Black and Co. being the patentees. The greater number of the inhabitants are fishermen, about 200 boats belonging to the place. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,790.

Post Office; William Dewar, postmaster. Letters through Anstruther. Deliveries, 10 a.m. & 7.30 p.m.; dispatches, 10.30 a.m. & 3 & 8 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Anstruther, 1 mile distant.

KINCARDINE (or Kincardine-on-Forth) is a town on the north bank of the Firth of Forth, and in the parish of Tulliallan, transferred to this county by a Local Government Order in December, 1890, having up to that time been included in Perthshire. The town is a seaport and a burgh of barony, 15 miles west from North Queensferry and 5 south-east from Alloa, and has a station on the North British railway. At one time this place was called "West Pans," from the salt works established in it, but these have long ceased to exist. The town, although irregularly built and the streets narrow, contains some good houses. There is an Established church and two United Free churches, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The population in 1891 was 2,007, and in 1901, 1,710.

KINGHORN is a seaport and a royal police burgh and contributory parliamentary burgh, also a parish, 5 miles south from Kirkcaldy and $\frac{1}{2}$ east-by-north from Burntisland, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish is $\frac{1}{2}$ miles in extent from north to south by about 4 wide; it is in the poor combination of Kirkcaldy and Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded south by Burntisland, west by Aberdour and Auchtermol, and north by Abbotshall and part of Kirkcaldy. Kinghorn was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I. (1124-53), and about that time was said to have been a royal residence. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Dysart, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. There are two principal streets in the town, one running from east to west, and the other from south to north. The harbour has fallen to decay, and the nearest existing harbour is now at Petty-Cur, about half a mile distant. There is an ancient Established church, which has been restored at a cost of £3,000, and two United Free churches. The Town House is a good building, and there is a public library and museum at the school, and a branch of the British Linen Bank. In 1887 the municipal authorities purchased Links Park, adjoining the town, for public and recreation grounds, at a cost of £1,050, and expended in addition £300 in laying out the golf course, bowling green and tennis court. A golf club house was erected in 1894, facing the links. About a mile to the eastward of Kinghorn and near the coast, is the Kirkcaldy Combination Poorhouse for the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Abbotshall, Burntisland and Kinghorn. About 1 mile from Kinghorn, on the Burntisland road, is a monument in the form of a Celtic cross, erected to commemorate the death of Alexander III., who was killed by falling from his horse in 1286. The inscription reads, "To the illustrious Alexander III., the last of Scotland's Celtic Kings, who was accidentally killed near this spot, March 19th, MCDLXXXVI. Erected on the Sex-centenary of his death."

There is a strong battery at Inchkeith, which island forms part of the parish of Kinghorn, distant about three miles from Petty-Cur. It also has a large harbour, erected by the government at a considerable cost, and a lighthouse with a revolving light on the highest point of land standing 235 feet above the sea level. Certain writers say Inchkeith was so called from an old noble family named Keith, while others connect it with Guidi. Here, they supposed, was raised the town or fortress of Guida, described by Bede, more than 1,100 years ago, as situated in the middle of the great arm of the sea which runs into Britain from the east. About the year 700 a church or monastery, founded by St. Adamnan, successor to St. Columba in the abbacy of Iona, was erected on the island. Inchkeith was seized by the English in 1547, and a fort built on it, but during the regency of Mary, queen of James V. it was captured by the French.

The area of the parish comprises 5,401 acres; rateable value of landward, £10,000; and in 1891 had a population of 3,837, and in 1901, 3,400, of whom 1,177 in 1901 were in the parliamentary and police burghs, and 365 beyond burgh, and 1,089 in Kirkcaldy burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 2,262. Included in the population was 3 officials and 81 inmates in Kirkcaldy Combination poorhouse. The area of the burgh is 325 acres; rateable value, which includes part of Kirkcaldy, is £8,867.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1907 was 256. Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. & Telephone Call Office, 27 High street; Thos. Henderson, postmaster (Sub-Office). KINGGLASSIE is a parish and village, the latter 3 miles south from Leslie, 4½ north-east from Lochgelly, and 3 north from Cardenden station on the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Leslie on a branch line from Markinch. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and extends 5 miles from east to west by a width of 2 to 4 miles, is bounded north by Leslie and Portmoak, west by Auchterderran, south by Dysart, and east by Markinch. It is watered by the Lochty and the Ore, tributary streams of the Leven. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in mining. A Public Hall was erected in 1896, at a cost of £3,000, by the late Mr. Alexander Mitchell, of Redwells. A fair is entitled to be held on third Wednesday in May, and on the Thursday before Michaelmas (o.s.). John McNab esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,415 acres; rateable value, £13,141; the population in 1891 was 1,372, and in 1901, 1,478, including 520 in the village.

KINGSEAT, see DUNFERMLINE.

KIRKCALDY,

WITH ABBOTSHALL, CHAPEL, PATHHEAD, SINCLAIRTOWN AND GALLATOWN.

KIRKCALDY is a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, a seaport and parish, in the Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination and of a small debt court district, with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway, 12 miles east of Dunfermline. The parish of Kirkcaldy is 3 miles in extent from north to south, by one mile wide, and is bounded north and east by Dysart, south and west by Kinghorn, and north-west by Auchterderran; the parish extends along the northern shores of the Firth of Forth, at the base of a range of rising ground for upwards of 3 miles. By an Act of Parliament the suburbs of Abbotshall, Pathhead, Gallatown and Sinclairtown are comprised within the boundaries of the burgh, as are also the quoad sacra parishes of St. James, Interviel, Raith and Pathhead. On the 3rd of December, 1901, the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Dysart, Abbotshall, and a part of that of Kinghorn were amalgamated and are now under the Kirkcaldy and Dysart Parish Council. The civic government of the town, which was made a royal burgh by Charles I. is vested in a town council consisting of 27 members, including a provost and admiral of the burgh and harbour, four bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer. The council are also commissioners of police under the General Police Act, and local authority under the Health Act. The management of the harbour has been vested since 1904 in the Town Council, and in the same year considerable extensions were commenced. The burgh, together with Kinghorn, Dysart and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The sheriff holds a court every Wednesday for the disposal of ordinary debts recovery, and small debt cases. The justices of the peace sit here for the trial of offences within the Kirkcaldy district of county, and here also hold licensing courts; this is also the meeting place for the County Council of the district. When Charles I. erected Kirkcaldy into a royal burgh, it had, according to tradition, 100 ships belonging to it, and ranked as the sixth place of maritime importance in Scotland; but in 1673 the number of vessels in its possession had decreased considerably. On the return of peace in 1763, the trade of the port revived, and the number of shipping consequently increased and progressively augmented, so that in 1792 it boasted 26 vessels. From this period Kirkcaldy has gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The principal importations are cork, linseed oil, whiting, potters' clay, grain &c.; the exports are floor cloth, linoleum, linen, yarn, machinery and coal. A branch from the main line of railway traverses the entire length of the harbour, which is dry at low water, but at full tide is capable of admitting vessels of large burden. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1905, from and to foreign countries and British possessions, with cargoes and in ballast was: British, 7 of 653 tons; foreign, 208 of 23,280 tons. Cleared: 26 British, 3,565 tons; foreign, 448, 50,601 tonnage. In the coasting trade, 613 vessels entered of 75,298 tonnage, and 328 cleared of 43,184 tons; in intercourse with Great Britain and Ireland, 5 only entered, of 381 tons. In 1905, 96,942 tons of coal were shipped from this port. In 1905, 28 vessels, aggregating 1,430 tons, were registered in this port; the number of fishing boats registered at the port was 438, aggregating 8,973 tons, and employing 2,306 men and boys, and 533 hands. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters K. Y. The custom house, having control over a considerable line of coast, extending from Aberdeen to Wemyss, has been removed to Burntisland. There is, however, an office here. The prominent trade of Kirkcaldy and neighbourhood bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting of the spinning of flax, tow, jute, and the weaving of linen goods for home and foreign consumption; striped hollands, dowlas, ticks, checks, sailcloths &c. are amongst the fabrics produced, and in the manufacture of which there are several extensive power-loom factories in full operation; there are also several bleaching fields and dye works, and also china and earthenware factories, where a superior class of goods is made. Kirkcaldy is now the centre of the floor cloth and linoleum manufacture of the kingdom. The other branches include brass and iron founding, machine and steel pipe making, and a considerable corn, malt and meal trade. The town, owing to its disproportionate length, has from an early period been styled "the lang toon o' Kirkcaldy," but it now comprises many well-built cross streets and detached dwellings. Electric tramways and lighting are provided by the Corporation, who have a large power station in Victoria road; the principal streets were lighted with arc lamps and private consumers supplied in December, 1902; other streets being lighted with gas; and an overhead system of tramways was opened for traffic in Feb. 1903. The streets are paved. The Town Hall, erected in 1829, contains a hall for burgh and district meetings, and record room, an office for the town clerk, and other apartments. The Sheriff Court Buildings, in Whyte's Causeway, were opened May, 1894, at a cost of £6,000. Here the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday. The district committee meetings of the County Council are also held here, and the Justice of Peace Courts. There are two good hotels, the "George," in High street, and the "Station" near the railway station. Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations," was born here June 5, 1723. The Adam Smith Public Hall in St. Brycedale avenue, also contains the Beveridge Hall and Library, built with money left for this purpose by the late Michael Beveridge esq. of Beechwood, and provost of Kirkcaldy; the library contains about 10,000 volumes. Provost Beveridge also gifted to the inhabitants a fine public park, some 100 acres in extent, with an artificial lake in the centre, which in winter is used as a skating pond. The Burgh Police Buildings, erected in 1902-3, at a cost of £20,000, are of Grange stone in the Renaissance style, from designs by Mr. William Williamson, and contains a police court and offices for the burgh police. The Corn Exchange, in Cowan street, the first stone of which was laid with masonic honours in May, 1859, is now used only for public meetings, concerts &c. The King's Theatre, in High street, was erected in 1903, and will seat 2,000 persons. The Combination Poorhouses were erected in 1849, at a cost of over £5,000, and opened May, 1850; the buildings are available for 130 inmates and are the joint property of the parishes of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, Burntisland and Kinghorn, nearly all being held by the parish of Kirkcaldy and Dysart. The management is vested in the Parish Councils; one of these is situated on the lands of Abden, in the parish of Kinghorn and commands an extensive view of the Firth of Forth; the other at Thornton was erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, and will hold 155 inmates. The Swan Memorial, a building of red stone, was erected in 1895, at the bottom of Kirkwynd, as a memorial to the late Provost Swan, and contains a set of rooms for the Young Men's Christian Association, to whom it belongs.

The parish church of Kirkcaldy, mainly erected in 1807, stands on rising ground in the centre of the town, the principal feature of the building being the fine Norman tower, dating from the middle of the 13th century, and formerly part of the old church of St. Brisse, dedicated in A.D. 1244: in the south porch is a marble monument to George Gillespie, one of the commissioners to the Westminster Assembly in 1643, and there are two stained windows, designed by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. D.C.L. and executed by the late William Morris F.S.A. of London. St. James's church, built in 1841 as a chapel for the original seeders, has belonged since 1853 to the Church of Scotland. St. Brycedale United Free church, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected at a cost (exclusive of the site, which is valued at about £8,000) of fully £22,000. It contains a number of memorial windows, two of which are from designs by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. The other places of worship are the parish churches of Invertel, Abbotshall, Raith, St. Clairtown and Pathhead; there are also ten United Free churches, and Episcopalian and Original Secession, Congregational, Baptist, Wesleyan, Unitarian and Roman Catholic churches. The High School, built on the site of the old burgh school, by M. B. Nairn esq. of Rankelour, then chairman of the Kirkcaldy School Board, includes an elementary department. The schools, established under the will of the late Robert Philp esq. of Edenshead, for children of both sexes, have been transferred to the care of the School Board, and the children entitled to the benefits of this foundation are educated at the board schools, and receive clothing as before, free. A number of bursaries are also provided for the purpose of enabling the children of poor parents to attend the High School, or to prosecute their studies at the universities. There is also a charitable trust left by John Thomson, for educating poor children, and for providing annuities for the support of poor inhabitants. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited (with sub-branch at Pathhead), the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited (who have also a branch at Pathhead and sub-branches at the West End and at Dunnikier road), the Bank of Scotland, the Union of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. There is also the Kirkcaldy Savings Bank, with branches at Pathhead and Links street. Four newspapers are issued here, the "Life Free Press," "Fifeshire Advertiser," "Kirkcaldy Mail" and "Kirkcaldy Times." The market, which is a stock market for the sale of grain, is held on Saturday. The ruins of Ravenscraig Castle are near the northern boundary of the burgh, and Seafeld Tower, also a ruin, is on the south; both are on the coast overlooking the Forth. Raith, a mansion with a lofty tower and new grounds, is the residence of Ronald C. M. Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L. The principal landowners are John Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. of Dunnikier; R. C. Munro Ferguson esq. M.P. of Raith; Sir M. B. Nairn bart. and the trustees of the Earl of Rosslyn. The area of the parish comprises 1,215 acres; rateable value, £199,751. The population of the entire parish in 1901 was 39,039, and in 1891 the population of the old parish was 9,994; of Dysart, 13,626, and of Abbotshall, 6,934; total, 30,554. The royal burgh had a total population in 1891 of 27,151, and in 1901, 34,063. The area is 1,743 acres. The Parliamentary burgh had a population in 1901 of 16,840. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 9,927. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was, first, 10,325; second, 12,025; third, 11,733; total, 34,063.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1907 was 4,099, and in the whole district of burghs, 8,263.

ABBOTSHALL, formerly a distinct parish, was merged in the amalgamated parishes of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, 3 Dec. 1901, and is partly in the burgh of Kirkcaldy, and in Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination. The district, the extent of which is about 2 miles either way, rises gradually from the coast northward into tolerably high ground. The present parish church was built in 1788 to replace the original church erected at the first junction of the parish in 1650. The small village of Chapel is in this parish. The population in 1891 was 6,934, and in 1901, 7,733.

INVERTEL is a quoad sacra parish formed from those of Abbotshall and Kinghorn. Here are Established and United Free churches. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 2,615.

PATHHEAD, now included within the burgh, is in the parish of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, and is situated chiefly on the face of a hill, looking towards the Firth of Forth; it is joined by two other districts, respectively named Galloway and Sinclairtown, also in the same burgh and parish. The manufacture of linoleum, floorcloth and linen goods is briskly followed in these places. Dowlas, ticks, sheeting &c. are produced; flax spinning is also carried on to some extent. At Sinclairtown are earthenware manufactories. The Public hall, in Commercial street, was erected about 1883; a branch of the Beveridge library is located in this building, and there is also a reading room. At Pathhead are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A cottage hospital was erected in 1889, in Necher street, at the expense of Sir Michael B. Nairn bart. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Free church, and Episcopalian, Evangelical Union, Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The population in 1901 was 4,180.

LADYBANK is a village, 5 miles south-west from Cupar, ecclesiastical parish formed from Colleslie parish, and in conjunction with Monkston a police burgh, governed by a chief magistrate, two junior magistrates and six commissioners; it is in the parish of Colleslie, and is an important railway station on the North British system, being the junction for the lines from Edinburgh, Alloa and Perth with the line to Dundee. The chief business is linen manufacturing, but malting and bobbin making are likewise carried on. A United Free church, with spire, was erected here in 1876; a quoad sacra church has also been built, and there is a public school. The area of the burgh is 105 acres; rateable value, £4,401; the population in 1891 was 1,193, and in 1901, 1,340 burgh, and 1,476 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LARGO,INCLUDING LARGO (UPPER & LOWER) & LUNDIN.

LARGO is a parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, at the head of Largo bay, in the small debt court district of Leven, and contains the villages of Upper or Kirkton of Largo, Lundin Mill and Lower Largo, the latter a small seaport with a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, and there is another station at Lundin Links, one mile from Largo. The parish is 4 miles in extent from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ceres, east by Kilconquhar and Newburn, and west by Scoonie. A striking feature in the landscape is Largo Law, a conical hill, rising to a height of 950 feet above the level of the sea, and green to the summit, where it is cleft in two. From its top a splendid view of the Firth of Forth, with its islands, and the opposite shore of the Lothians is obtained. The minerals worked are coal and limestone, the latter being most excellent in quality. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here, and there is also a Savings Bank. Largo was the birthplace of Sir Andrew Wood, a celebrated admiral in the reign of James III. who presented him with the barony of Largo in recognition of his services, and the shore for an extent of 5 miles is still claimed by his descendants. Sir John Leslie, the philosopher, was also born here. Within the grounds of Largo House is a conical-topped tower, which formed part of the old castle built by Sir Andrew Wood. This tower, it is said, was built by the prisoners taken by Sir Andrew in his sea fights. Lower Largo was the birthplace, about 1676, of Alexander Selkirk, rendered famous by the pen of De Foe as "Robinson Crusoe." A descendant, named Catherine Selkirk, was resident in this village until her death, in 1862. Mr. David Gillies, of Ordy works, also a descendant of the family, has erected, on the site of his birthplace, a life-size bronze statue to Alexander Selkirk, which was unveiled 11th December, 1885, by the Earl of Aberdeen. The tablet bears the inscription—"In memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner, the original of Robinson Crusoe, who lived in the island of Juan Fernandez, in complete solitude, for four years and four months. He died 1723. Lieut. of H.M.S. Weymouth, aged 47 years." The Simpson Institute Hall, opened May 8th, 1891, was erected by means of a legacy of £4,000, bequeathed by Mrs. Galloway in memory of her father, George Simpson, of Upper Largo. It is an edifice of stone, in the old Scottish style, and is devoted to educational, recreative and social purposes: the interior contains a public hall, library and billiard room, and attached are grounds with a bowling green and tennis court. The institute is controlled by a board of trustees. Wood's Hospital, which stands in the kirktown of Largo, was erected under an endowment by Mr. John Wood, a native of this place, for "any man or woman of the name of Wood," to whatever part of Scotland he or she may belong. The foundation provides the inmates with two rooms each, beds and bedding, and the produce of the gardens. The parish church is in Upper Largo, and has in the transept a memorial window to Sir Andrew Wood, before named. A Celtic cross of unknown date, found in the parish in the year 1839 by General Durham, then proprietor of Largo, now stands in the parish churchyard. Largo house is a spacious mansion built in 1750, situated a little to the west of the village on a slope with southern aspect, amid richly ornamented grounds; it is the property of C. J. Maitland-Makgill-Crichton esq. but now (1907) the residence of Benjamin C. Cox esq. The soil is partly of a light character, but more commonly of a black loam. The inhabitants are mainly devoted to agricultural pursuits, and the chief crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, rye and flax. Sir John Gilmour bart. of Montrave, C. J. Maitland-Makgill-Crichton esq. of Lathrisk, Major-Genl. David Briggs D.L., J.P. of Strathairly House, and John Baxter esq. of Gilston, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,371 acres; rateable value, £22,560; the population in 1891 was 2,324, and in 1901, 2,046; of these 481 were in Lower Largo (and Temple) and 570 in Lundin Mill and Drumochie. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,895.

Lower Largo is a fishing village in this parish, one mile south-west from Upper Largo, 2½ miles north-east from Leven and 3½ south-west from Colinsburgh, on the shore of an indentation of the Firth of Forth, called Largo bay; it stands at the efflux of a rivulet named the Keil, whose estuary forms a harbour to the place.

Lundin Mill is a village adjoining Lower Largo, with a station called Lundin Links, on the North British railway. A square tower, which formed part of the ancient castle of Lundin, still remains. Here also are the three "Standing Stones of Lundin," supposed to have once formed part of a Druidical temple. Letters through Largo.

LASSODIE, see BEATH.

LESLIE is a parish, a burgh of barony and police burgh and a manufacturing town, the latter comprising the burghs of Leslie and the outlying districts of Croftoutery and Prinlows, and having a terminal station on the Markinch and Leslie branch of the North British railway, 12 miles east from Kinross, 12 south-west from Cupar, 9 north-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 west from Markinch. The parish is in the poor combination district of Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded north by Falkland, east by Markinch, south by Kinglassie, and west by Portmouak (Kinrossshire). The town, consisting principally of one street, running from east to west, is an ancient place, often frequented by King James when holding court at Falkland, and is governed by a council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The streets are lighted with gas. At the eastern entrance to the town is a public green, which in former times was the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting for the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. The increase of this town is attributable to the prosperity of its manufactures consisting of flax spinning, and bleaching and paper making; the works standing chiefly on the banks of the Leven. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The places of worship are the parish church, a quoad sacra church at Prinlaws, at the west end of the town, three United Free churches, and a Baptist chapel. There is a library consisting of about 1,200 volumes, connected with the Young Men's Christian Association, and Reading Room. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of April, and on the first Friday in October. The Earl of Rothes, of Leslie House, Robert Tullis esq. of Strathern, and Edward Balfour D.L., J.P. of Balbirnie, Markinch, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,944 acres; rateable value, £15,585 landward; area of burgh, 99 acres; rateable value, £6,345; the population in 1891 was 3,886, and in 1901, 3,960; the 3,479 persons in the town in 1901 were divided into 2,064 in the police burgh and 1,523 in Prinlaws and Croftoutery, and 373 landward.

Walkerton is a village in the parishes of Leslie and Kinglassie; the population in 1901 was 350.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office; Isaac Wilson, postmaster (Sub-Office). Letters should have S.O. Fifeshire added. Deliveries, 8.45 a.m. & 6.10 p.m.; dispatches, 6.25 & 9.20 a.m. & 1.20, 4.20 & 6.45 p.m.; no sunday delivery of letters

LEUCHARS is a parish and village on the sea coast to the north of St. Andrews bay; the village is 5 miles north-west from St. Andrews, and has a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and half a mile south is the station of Leuchars junction, on the North British main line. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, is about 5 miles from north to south, by the same in extent in width, and is bounded on the north by Forgan and Ferry-Port-on-Craig, west by Logie and south by the Eden. The ancient Established church, supposed to have been erected in the 12th century, is one of the most perfect examples of Norman architecture in Scotland. There is also a Mission church and St. Saviour's Episcopal church at Guard Bridge, and a United Free church. The Pitcairn Institute, the gift of Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitcullo, contains a library and reading rooms, and has recreation grounds attached to it. The St. Michael's Golf Club, established here in 1904, now numbers 150 members, and has a course of nine holes. At Guard Bridge, in this parish, are the works of the Guard Bridge Paper Co. Limited, and here also is a station on the North British railway. Balmullo, a small village, is also in this parish. Near Leuchars is the old castle of Earlsball, which has been restored by its owner, R. W. R. Mackenzie esq. J.P. The parish comprises 13,409 acres; rateable value, £24,246; the population in 1891 was 2,370, and in 1901, 2,499, including 711 in the village of Leuchars and 715 in that of Guard Bridge. Balmullo and Lucklawhill form a village in the parishes of Leuchars and Largo; population in 1901, 383.

LETHAM, see MONIMAIL.

LEVEN is a town in the parish of Scoonie and is bounded on the west by the river Leven, which here runs into the Firth of Forth, and is crossed by a bridge, forms a good harbour, and has a dock, 500 feet long by 250 wide, capable of taking in vessels up to 400 tons burthen, opened in January, 1880, at a cost of £40,000. As a seaside resort Leven attracts a large number of visitors during the summer months. Inner Leven, connected with Leven by a stone bridge over the Leven, has, in conjunction with Buckhaven and Methil, been made into a police burgh. The town, which is the head of a small debt court district, is 9 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy and 3 south-west from Largo, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The Wemyss and District Tramway Co. Limited also opened a new line, 25 Aug. 1906, connecting the town of

Leven with Kirkcaldy. The town is irregularly built, and consists of three main streets and a collection of houses bordering the links, where three golf clubs are established, with three good club houses. There is an excellent water supply, which provides also for Lundin Links and Methil Docks. The police burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The sheriff holds a small debt circuit court here, the day after the second Monday in January, April and July, and Friday after the first Monday in October. The principal imports are flax, tow, barley, linseed, bones and timber. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax, and seed crushing, paper making, engineering &c. the mills of the first-named trade, especially, employing a considerable number of hands. The Scottish Cyanide Co. also have extensive works at Kirkland, and there is a bone dust mill, salt works and rope walks, as well as a large timber yard and saw mill. In the district are collieries, and the Fife Coal Co. whose offices adjoin the railway station, are large employers of labour. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. A fair is held on the Thursday after the third Monday in July. The Greig Institute, erected in 1873, contains a news room, library, billiard room and a class room for technical instruction; its name was adopted in compliment to Mr. Greig, of Glencarse, who gave the site and £1,000 towards the building fund. The Established church was erected in 1903 at a cost of £5,000, in place of the old church, then demolished: there are also two United Free churches and a Baptist chapel: the Episcopal church of St. Margaret of Scotland, built in 1881, will seat 200 persons; the rectory, value £242, has been held since 1900 by the Rev. J. W. Harper M.A. of Aberdeen University. There is also an institute and a reading room. A large public school was erected in 1893, at a cost of £10,000, for 1,200 children, the average attendance being about 1,100. A bequest by the late Edward Boase, of Leven, of £500, yields a bursary of £25, tenable for three years, and the late Alexander Balfour, a former resident of Leven, left £12 per annum for three bursaries for boys or girls. The Caledonian hotel is near the bay shore, and has a large posting establishment attached. The "Leven Advertiser" is published every Thursday, price one halfpenny. The rateable value of the town is £20,916; the population in 1891 was 4,577, and in 1901, 5,577.

Post, T. M. O., S. B., A. & I. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, Durie street; Alexander Hunter, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.40 a.m. & 3.45 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 6 & 7.35 a.m. 12 noon & 3.55 & 7.15 p.m.; sundays, 6.15 a.m.

LIBERTY, see ELIE.

LIMEKILNS is a small village, and
 with the creek of Brucehaven forms a small harbour on the north bank of the Forth of Forth, in the parish of Dunfermline
 and parliamentary division of West
 Fife, 4 miles west from North Queensferry
 and 3 south of Dunfermline town, and has a United Free church. The adjoining village of Charlestown forms a part of the port, and contains a station on the Dunfermline and Charlestown branch of the North British Railway, opened for passenger traffic 1st September, 1894. There is a shipbuilding yard at Brucehaven, and at Charlestown, which is the property of the Earl of Elgin, and contains a harbour
 formed by him, but now owned by the North British Railway Co. Large quantities of coal and lime are shipped; there

are also two salt works and a lime kiln
 and an iron foundry. The population in 1901 was Charlestown 750, Limekilns 552,
 and in 1891 the figures were 673 and 582.

MARKINC is a parish extending 5 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 in breadth, in the poor combination of Kirkcaldy and Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and bounded north by Kettle, east by Kennoway, south by Dysart and Wemyss, and west by Kinglassie and Leslie. Its kirktown, which has a station on the main line of the North British railway, lies 10 miles south-west from Cupar, 8 north from Kirkcaldy and 6 west of Leven, and is a police burgh and is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. It occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground, and on the highest part is seated the church. There are extensive paper mills, bleachfields and a woollen manufactory. The districts round about in coal. In the village there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is a town hall. The Municipal Buildings, erected in 1899, were the gift of Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie. The places of worship include a church of the Establishment and United Free churches. The parish is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Orr, and the great road through the county crosses it. The North British railway is carried over the first-named river by means of a viaduct of ten arches, nearly 90 feet in height. Balgonie Castle, the property of O. B. Balfour esq. of Newton Don, but now a ruin, stands on the south bank of the Leven, in the midst of some finely-wooded grounds. About half a mile to the east is Balfour House, also the property of C. B. Balfour esq. and now (1907) occupied by Lady Angela S. B. Forbes. Balbirnie, an elegant mansion, is the seat of Edward Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. and lies about half a mile north-west of the village. Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie, and Charles Barrington Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. of Balgownie and Newton Don, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,694 acres; the population in 1891 was 6,377, and in 1901, 6,803, including 6 officials and 118 inmates in Dysart Combination Poorhouse; the population of the police burgh in 1901 was 1,499, and the rateable value of Markinch, with Windygates, landward, £44,047; burghal £7,151. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 3,580. Area of burgh, 120 acres.

Windy gates, now the head of a post district, in this parish, stands on the high road between Markinch and Leven, about 2 miles west from the latter. Contiguous to the village is the extensive distillery of the Distillers' Company, Limited. Close to Windygates is Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1901, 636.

Woodside, in the parish of Markinch, is a small village about one mile and a half south-west from Markinch, its post town, and 2 from Thornton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the paper mills and bleachfields in the neighbourhood. Population in 1901, 232. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Miltown, or Milton of Balgonie, is a village about midway between Windygates and Markinch, in the parish of Markinch, and quoad sacra parish. The nearest railway station is Markinch, a mile and a half distant. There is an Established church here. Population in 1901, 406.

Coaltown, or Coaltan of Balgonie, lies one mile and a half south from Markinch, its post town and parish. The Queen Victoria Memorial Hall here was erected in 1906 and is licensed for theatrical entertainments. The inhabitants are principally employed at the Balgonie colliery and bleachfields in the immediate neighbourhood. Population in 1901, 683. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

Thornton is a village in the civil parish of Markinch, and quoad sacra parish formed from Markinch, Dysart and Kinglassie civil parishes; it is near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, and close to the Thornton junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British and the Leven and East of Fife railways, which have a joint station here. The Kirkcaldy and Dysart Poor Combination, erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, and situated about half a mile from the village, is available for 155 inmates. There is a chapel of the Established church and a United Free Church hall. Population in 1901, village, 1,147, ecclesiastical parish, 1,863.

Balcurnie is situated on an eminence about half a mile from Windygates, its post town, in the parish of Markinch, about 3 miles east from the latter place, one mile south from Kennoway, and half a mile from Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Population in 1901, 277.

Auchmuty and Balbirnie Mills form a village in Markinch parish; population in 1901, 335.

ISLE OF MAY. This small island, only 1 mile by three-quarters in extent, is nevertheless the largest and most interesting in the Firth of Forth; at its widest
part it is about one-third of a mile across,
and its highest point is not more than 150 feet above the sea level; the shore is extremely rough, stretching out on the north and east into low jagged rocks, and
rising on the west and south in precipi-
tous cliffs; there are three landing places,
one on the north-west, called "Altar-
stones," and two on the east side, of which one, called "Kirk Haven," is a narrow inlet enclosed by rocks; the surface of the island is mostly grass, but is very uneven. On the island is a light-house, with a light on the dioptric or
refracting principle, visible at 21 miles.
The island, though included in the county
of Fife, is not connected with any parish,
and lies at the mouth of the Firth of Forth, 6 miles south-east of Cellardyke
and the same distance south-east-by-south
from Crail. Above Kirk Haven, on a slope below the lofty cliffs overhanging
the Pilgrims' Haven, are some remains of a priory once existing here, and consisting of a small and long ruinous building,
known as St. Adrian's chapel, which in
Oct. 1868 was repaired under the direction of the Board of Works; it is a simple rectangular structure, running
north and south, internally about 32 feet
in length, and is probably of the 13th
century; on the west side are two small
and deeply splayed windows, obtusely
pointed, and portions of others; since its
first erection, a circular tower, pierced
with oillits, has been built on to the south-west angle of the chapel, and a low
structure, with traces of vaulting, across the entire north end. There are several wells on the island, but good water has
to be obtained from Crail; the inhabitants keep poultry, cows and sheep, and cultivate barley and vegetables. The population in 1891 was 27, and in 1901, 16.

MONIMAIL is a parish, in the northern part of the county, and in the small debt
court district of Cupar, its kirktown being 5 miles west of Cupar. It is bounded on the north by Dunbog, Creich, and Moonzie,
on the south by Culis and Colleslie, on the east by Cupar, and on the west by Abdie;
it is 5 miles from north to south by a breadth of 4. Colleslie, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Ladybank section of the North British railway, is the nearest station.
The northern parts consist of a fine range
of hills, the highest of which is called Mount Hill. The monument to the late Earl of Hopetoun, erected on its summit,
is a plain Doric column, 92 feet in height,
and within is a narrow spiral staircase
giving access to the top, whence a fine
view of the valley of the Eden and the Firths of Forth and Tay is obtained. The greater portion of the parish is in a high
state of cultivation, the remainder being pasture and woodland. The parish church
at Monimail is a handsome building, and contains nearly 600 sittings. There is also a United Free church at the Bow of Fife.
Ferne Castle, a place of great antiquity,
and once of considerable strength, is now
the residence of Major Francis W. Balfour D.L., J.P. Melville House is the residence of Miss Leslie-Melville. The Earl of Leven and Melville, Major F. W.
Balfour, of Ferne, E. W. Rankine esq.
of Cannoquhie, and Henry W. Hope esq.
of Runkellour Hope, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,543 acres;
rateable value, £8,349; the population in 1891 was 769, and in 1901, 720.

Bow of Fife is a hamlet in the parish, 1 1/2 miles south-east from the kirktown. Springfield is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

Easter Ferne is a hamlet in the parish.
Cunar is the nearest railway station, 3 1/2
miles distant.

Letham is a village in the parish. The nearest railway station is at Colleslie, 1 1/2
miles distant.

NEWBURGH is a royal burgh and a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Tay, 33 miles north from Edinburgh, 11 south-east from Perth, 10 north-west from Cupar, and a station on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. The town consists of one long street lying east and west, parallel with the course of the river, and a few streets leading towards the shore, where there are quays for shipping and a spacious harbour. The Tay up to this point is navigable for vessels of about 400 tons, and from here to Perth during spring tides for vessels of 300 tons. According to some authorities the town owes its origin to the patronage of the adjacent abbey of Lindores, founded in 1178 by David, Earl of Huntingdon, on his return from the Holy Land. In the year 1266 the town was erected into a burgh of regality, and in 1631 Charles I. granted to the place a charter, forming the community into a royal burgh. There is, however, no evidence of it ever having sent a member to the Scottish parliament. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, with a treasurer and a town clerk; it is the head of a small debt court district and a police burgh. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south, by 1 to 2 broad, is bounded east by Aulde, south by Collesie, and west by Abernethy in Perthshire and Auchtermuchty. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited, and also a Savings Bank. The manufacture of linen goods may be considered the staple trade of the place, exclusive of which the business in corn and potatoes is considerable; and there is a large floor cloth factory; the salmon fishery and the sale of fruit are also of importance. The name of Newburgh is supposed to have been conferred upon it in contradistinction to the ancient decayed burgh of Abernethy, which lies about three miles to the west. The Town Hall stands near the centre of the town. The Laing Institute, erected in 1895, and incorporating the Free Library, owes its origin to a bequest of Alexander Laing LL.D. of this town, who left £1,000 for the building and £400 as an endowment fund, together with his own valuable library. There are now (1907) about 4,200 volumes in the lending department and 3,700 in the reference department. In the High street is a fountain, erected as a memorial to John Livingstone esq. of Edinburgh, who was the donor of the Livingstone Hall, a building in the Cupar road. The places of worship include the Established church of St. Catherine, erected in 1833, United Free and Evangelical Union churches, a Baptist chapel, and an Episcopal Mission Hall. A fair is held on the third Friday in June. There are two ancient crosses within the parish, one at Mugdrum, about thirteen feet high, and the Macduff cross, now only fragmentary, but of great interest, from its having been granted to Macduff as a sanctuary for his successful aid against Macbeth. About a mile to the east are the remains of the abbey of Lindores. The unfortunate David Stewart, Duke of Rothsay, eldest son and heir of Robert III. who died at Falkland Palace, 26th March, 1402, was buried here. Several stone coffins have at different times been discovered, and are still to be seen. Edmund de Haya Paterson Balfour-Hay esq. J.P. of Mugdrum, and Jas. T. Cathcart esq. D.L., J.P. of Pitcairnie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,999 acres; area of burgh, 606 acres; rateable value, landward and burghal, £7,924, and railway, £412. The population in 1891 was 1,812, and in 1901, 1,780, viz.:—Royal burgh, 1,500; beyond royal burgh, 146; landward, 134. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 1,734.

Part of the parish of Abdie has been added to the burgh.

NEWBURN is a parish, on the north-east coast of Largo Bay, its kirktown being two miles north-east from Largo, 5 from Leven, and 10 south-by-west from St. Andrews. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south by 1½ breadth, is in the small debt court district of Leven, and is bounded north and west by Largo, east by Elie and Kilconquhar, and south by the Bay of Largo. The nearest railway station is at Largo on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. Here is an Established church. Three-fourths of the land is under cultivation, and the inhabitants are dependent on agriculture for employment. Col. Chas. Fredk. St. Clair Anstruther-Thomson M.V.O., D.S.O. of Charleton, Colinsburgh, and W. Baird esq. J.P. of Elie house, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,046 acres; rateable value, £3,935. The population in 1891 was 322, and in 1901, 292.

NEWPORT AND WORMIT.

NEWPORT, a handsome village and a police burgh, in the civil parish of Forgan and quoad sacra parish formed from Forgan, stretching along the Firth of Tay, is picturesquely situated, directly opposite to Dundee, and about 2 miles north therefrom, and 3 south-west from Tayport, the ground sloping upwards to a considerable height from the river Tay. Many villas have been erected here; and the climate being salubrious and comparatively mild, it has now become a popular suburb of Dundee. The south end of the Tay Bridge is at Wormit, about a mile to the west of Newport. There is a station on the North British railway at East Newport for goods and passengers, and one at West Newport for passengers only. Newport was made a burgh in November, 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. It possesses five churches, and a public hall, erected at a cost of £4,000. The area of the burgh is 305; rateable value, £30,468. Population in 1891, 2,700, and in 1901 was burgh, 3,976, and ecclesiastical parish, 2,063.

Wormit (now incorporated with Newport) is pleasantly and conveniently situated for Dundee business men: there is a station here on the North British line, and many villas overlooking the river have been erected since the opening of the Tay Bridge. There is an Established Church and a United Free Church. The population in 1901 was 876.

NEWTON OF FALKLAND, see FALKLAND.OAKFIELD, see BEATH.*OAKLEY, see CARNOCK.*PATHHEAD, see KIRKCALDY.*PITLESSIE, see CULTS.

PITTENWEEM is a seaport, a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, and a small parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending from east to west, and has a small harbour for vessels drawing under 12 feet, and a station on the Thornton Junction, Leven and East of Fife section of the North British railway, 5 miles south-west from Craill, 11 south-east from St. Andrews, 21 north-east from Kirkcaldy and 16 south-east from Cupar; together with the two Anstruthers, Craill, Cupar, Kilrenny and St. Andrews it forms the St. Andrew's parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform

Act of 1832," and returning one member. It is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 9 councillors. The parish, which is in the small debt court of Anstruther, is bounded north by Carnbee and Anstruther Wester, east by the Anstruthers, south by the Firth and west by St. Monance. The burgh was originally attached to a priory, some remains of which stand on a hill above the harbour: it was created a royal burgh in 1537 by James V. whose charter was confirmed by Charles I. The town consists of three good streets, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. The Established church, situated near the ruins of the priory, is an ancient edifice with a turretted spire, and there is a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1805, affords 168 sittings: the rectory, net value £176, has been held since 1871 by the Rev. F. F. K. Lloyd B.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, High street, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in

James street. From the time of its being erected into a royal burgh until 1639, it appears that Pittenweem was a place of considerable note and trade; but from that period to the year 1645 it suffered severely, no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels belonging to this port having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It is now a fishing station of some importance and fish curing is carried on rather extensively, and there is also a substantial trade in potatoes and barrel staves; there are two large cooperages and sail making houses. Mrs. Irvine, of Grangemuir, Sir Ralph Wm. Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P. of Balcaiskie, and Col. William Baird J.P. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 666 acres; rateable value, landward, £513: burghal, £6,017; the population in 1891 was 1,931, and in 1901, 1,911. The population in 1901 was, of the royal and parliamentary burgh, 1,859, and police burgh, 1,863.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 309.

ST. ANDREWS.

ST. ANDREWS is a seaport and ancient city, a royal burgh and a university, in the parish of St. Andrew and St. Leonard, which extends 9 miles along the shore of its bay, and is from 1 to 3 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the parishes of Dunino, Cameron, Ceres and Kemback, on the east by Kingsbarns and on the west by Leuchars. The town has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, which forms a junction at Leuchars with the line to the Tay bridge and the north, and is 39 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 10 east-by-north from Cupar and 10 north-west from Crail. St. Andrews was created a free (royal) burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I. (1124-53), and confirmed by Malcolm IV. (1153-65); the charter of the latter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spottiswoode and some other royalists, in 1646, are still to be seen in the Town Hall. The city is governed by a provost, a dean of guild and two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer, and is the head of a small debt court district.

The burgh unites with Cupar, the Anstruthers, Kilrenny, Pittenweem and Crail in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. There are three principal streets: North street, which contains some fine buildings, including those of the United College of St. Salvador and St. Leonard; Market street, which runs through the middle of the town; and South street, a spacious thoroughfare lined with trees, extending from the old west port to the ruins of the ancient cathedral. From the tower of the church of St. Regulus, a structure of the early 12th century, 109 feet in height, a beautiful view is afforded of the Bell rock, the bay, the city and the surrounding country. The ruins of the once formidable castle, the frequent scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others, and of his own assassination, 29 May, 1546, lie towards the north-east and jut out into the sea. On the shore to the westward is a small eminence called the Witch Hill, where those convicted of witchcraft were tortured or put to death. Near this spot is a monumental obelisk, 30 feet in height, raised in 1842 to the memory of George Wishart, a

Scottish reformer, burnt at St. Andrews in the presence of Cardinal Beaton, 1 March, 1545-6, to Mill, another reformer, and others. The ruins of the Blackfriars Convent stand by the Madras college. St. Andrews at one time had an extensive foreign trade. The harbour is not large, and is very difficult of access, but is a safe anchorage, its most dangerous wind being from the north-east. The export traffic is chiefly in potatoes and grain, and the import in coals, paving stones &c. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, and the British Linen Bank. Golf, one of the national games of Scotland, has its stronghold in St. Andrews, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club having been established in 1754; H.M. the King is patron. and it numbers upwards of 1,000 members; two great meetings are held annually. The principal hotels are Rusack's Marine and the Golf, facing the sea, the Royal in South street, and the Alexandra, Imperial, Grand and the Cross Keys in Market street. The Memorial Cottage Hospital for medical and surgical cases, in Abbey Park, is supported by voluntary contributions; hon. sec. and treasurer, R. H. Littlejohn; hon. medical superintendent, J. W. Moir M.D. The hospital in Argyle street, the gift of the late William Gibson, for aged and infirm persons, was erected at a cost of £4,000, and opened in January, 1884. There are four public halls, viz., the Town Hall, in South street; the City Hall, in Church square; the Good Templar Hall, North street and the Rifle Volunteers' Hall, in City road, the last-named and the Town Hall being large structures, suitable for entertainments and public meetings. This hall is also the head quarters of the 6th (Fifeshire) Volunteer Battalion, Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), and of G. Co. of the battalion.

The legendary history of the see of St. Andrews ascribes its foundation to the translation hither of the relics of St. Andrew, by the hands of Regulus, a monk of Achaia, who, about A.D. 370, is said to have been miraculously guided to this spot, but its actual establishment is with much greater probability attributed to Acca, bishop of Hexham, A.D. 700-39, who settled here as a refugee from his own diocese, then ravaged by the Danes. The cathedral of St. Andrew, now a complete ruin, was connected with the ancient Culdean monastery once existing here, and with the later Augustinian priory, founded in the 12th century. It was begun in 1180, and consisted of a nave of twelve bays, transepts with eastern aisles, choir of six bays with aisles, eastern lady chapel and a central tower, 108 feet high; the total length of the church being 377 feet; the monastic building adjoined on the south side. Of the original Norman work there remains the east end of the lady chapel with its flanking turrets, the bases of some of the piers in the choir, the west and south walls of the south transept, and part of the south wall of the nave, the rest of which and what remains of the west front date from the period 1271-9; beyond these portions scarcely anything now exists. Of the priory, nothing is left save the south wall of the chapter house, its vestibule, and some walling adjacent; the cloister earth was 132 feet square, with an alley on each side; the precincts were enclosed by the existing wall, built 1522-35, and continued along the south-east side of the town; this fine work reared by Prior Hepburn, includes 14 round or square towers, each with an external niche, and once had a corbelled battlemented parapet. The destruction of the cathedral and the priory has been attributed to the fanatic violence of Knox and his adherents, but recent examinations of the site have suggested that its collapse was really due to the inherent weakness of its construction; in or about 1887 the plan of the cathedral was discovered by excavation, and is now marked out on the turf. The see of St. Andrews was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric in 1466, Patrick Graham, then bishop of Brechin, being appointed the first archbishop. After the Revolution of 1688 the see was abolished, but was revived in 1844, in place of the intermediate see of Fife, which existed from 1726 to 1844, and it now includes also Dunkeld and Dunblane.

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, in South street, was built in 1412; the present structure, erected in 1800 upon the foundations of the old church, is about 160 feet long by 80 wide, and contains a fine monument to Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son in 1679; it is of white marble, and includes a kneeling figure of the prelate, and below, in relief, is a carved representation of his assassination by the Covenanting faction, 3 May, 1697. There is also the parish church of St. Leonard, a chapel of ease to Holy Trinity, two United Free churches, Baptist, Congregational and Roman Catholic chapels, and a Scottish Coast Mission station. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1869, will seat 655 persons; the incumbency, net value £428, has been held since 1899 by the Rev. E. G. A. Winter M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. Attached are All Saints', in Castle street, and the Mission chapel, at Guard Bridge.

The market is held on Monday, and the fairs (for hiring) on the second Tuesday in August and the first Monday after the 10th of November. The area of the parish comprises 12,570 acres: value of landward, £23,274; area of burgh, 851 acres: value, £83,932; the population of the civil parish of St. Andrews and St. Leonards in 1901 was 9,410, and out of these the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 7,621. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was, St. Andrews, 3,261 and St. Leonards, 4,248. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was: first, 2,404; second, 3,112; third, 2,105; total, 7,621.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register for 1908 was, St. Andrews burgh, 1,143, and of the district, 3,247.

Denhead, a small village, is partly in this parish and partly in that of Cameron; for names, see Cameron. Boarhills and Guard Bridge are also small villages, distant about 4 miles from, and partly in the parish of, St. Andrews.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

This University, the oldest in Scotland, was first founded in 1410 by Bishop Wardlaw, and in 1411 obtained a charter and endowments, soon after which Benedict XIII. issued a papal bull in its favour.

The original colleges were St. Salvador's, founded in 1450; St. Leonard's, founded in 1512 and St. Mary's in 1537; of these, St. Salvador's and St. Leonard's were united into one college in 1747, by Act of Parliament, and in 1890, University College, Dundee, was affiliated to St. Andrew's.

The united college occupies comparatively new buildings, and has a principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, mathematics, natural history, medicine, chemistry, anatomy, English literature, and education. The college of St. Mary consists of a principal and professors of divinity, biblical criticism, church history and Oriental languages.

The University Library, which contains 115,000 volumes, was founded in 1610, and occupies a building sometime used for the sittings of the Scottish Parliament; of the old buildings of St. Salvador only the chapel and steeple remain, and of St. Leonard's only the ruins of the chapel. The insignia of the University comprise three maces of unusual design and of high antiquity and interest: the earliest of these, the mace of the Faculty of Arts, dates from 1418, and is of silver parcel gilt, and 4ft. 2½ in. long; the staff is quite plain and divided into three portions by rounded knobs, and a foot knob, spreading out into a wider base, and all ornamented with spiral bands; from a foliated knob springs a hexagonal covered platform or corbel supporting the head, which is of the same form and consists of tabernacle work in three stages: the lowermost displays, within ogee crocketed arches divided by pinnacles, figures of angels, holding respectively the shields of arms of (1) Scotland; (2) Abp. Spotswood; (3) Bp. Wardlaw; (4) Earl of Mar; (5) Earl of Douglas; (6) Duke of Albany: the second stage, diminishing in size, is similar, but the niches contain figures of saints, viz., St. Michael, St. John the Baptist, the Virgin and Child, St. Andrew, St. Leonard, and a female figure, trampling under foot a dragon; in the upper and smallest stage the sides have open tracery and triangular crocketed heads. The mace of the Faculty of Canon Law (now the Theological Faculty) dating from a period antecedent to 1457, is also parcel gilt and 4ft. 1½ in. long: it is similar in design, but the knobs of the shaft are more elaborate, and each stage of the head is finished with a cresting; in the lower stage the figures of the angels remain, but the shields they bore are all lost: the middle stage exhibits figures in flat chasing of (1) The Trinity; (2) The Virgin and Child; (3) The Good Shepherd; (4) St. Mango; (5) St. Andrew; (6) St. Peter: the upper stage displays open tracery of varied design. The mace of the college of St. Salvador, made in Paris in 1461 by Jean Mayelle, goldsmith, and presented to the college by James Kennedy, bishop of St. Andrews, 1440-65, and founder of the college, is of silver gilt, and 3ft. 9½ in. long: it is by far the most artistic and remarkable of the three, and in point of design is probably unique: the shaft, divided into four portions by curious knobs, is chased for its whole length with spiral bands, bearing the initials J K united by a tasselled cord and surmounted by a coronet, alternating with columbine flowers; the knobs are hexagonal, that nearest the top displaying elaborate tabernacle work with crocketed canopies and niches:

on the three principal sides are small pulpit-like projections, in which are figures of angels holding talents: the remaining sides have smaller canopied niches containing figures of monks reading: the central knob is similar, but less elaborate, and has no figures: the lower knob is still plainer, and has in a recess the figure of a man preaching, and in embattled projections above, three figures kneeling, with their faces towards the staff, which terminates below in an elegant expanding foliated ornament, on which are figures of four lions passant, with their heads downwards: the head of the mace is an elaborately designed open shrine, resting on a base adorned with couchant lions and molded pendants: within the shrine is an image of the Saviour with hands upraised, and on either side are open projections, terminating outwards in crenellated turrets, and enshrining figures of kneeling angels holding symbols of the Passion: below, on three sides, are figures of a king, a bishop and a mendicant: the other three sides have recesses containing grotesque figures holding shields, with the arms of the see, Bishop Kennedy, and one with an orb: the summit of the head consists of highly enriched double canopies, with crocketing and finials: the whole design is manifestly symbolical.

The St. Andrews School for Girls Co. Limited, has two important schools here for senior and junior pupils respectively. President of the Company, the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Chairman of the Council, Professor Thomas Purdie B.Sc., Ph.D., LL.D., F.R.S.

St. Leonard's School is intended to provide for girls an education equal to that given to boys at the great public schools. It has seven houses for boarders, each holding from 26 to 31 girls, and an auxiliary house for 12 girls. There are also some 20 day scholars. Attached are grounds of 16 acres, including a cricket field, golf course, and tennis, hockey, and fives courts; instruction is also given, by arrangement, in riding and driving. There is a hospice for non-infectious, and a sanatorium for infectious illnesses. The council give six scholarships, each of the value of £20 per annum, to girls who have obtained one of the higher certificates of the Oxford and Cambridge Board, and have been not less than two years in the school, and these are tenable as long as the holders remain at the school.

Annually, in October, the Council give a scholarship of £35 a year, tenable for three years at any college selected by the scholar. Triennially, in October, Miss Dove's Classical Scholarship of £20 a year, with £15 added by the council, and tenable for three years at Girton College, Cambridge, is awarded.

ST. DAVID'S, see DALGETTY.ST. LEONARDS, see ST. ANDREWS.

ST. MONANCE (or Abercrombie) is a parish and a burgh of barony, 2 miles west of Pittenweem, 10 south of St. Andrews and 14 south-east from Cupar, having a small harbour on the Firth of Forth and a station on the Thornton junction, Leven and East of Fife line, of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 1½ in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and is bounded north and north-east by Carnbee, east by Pittenweem and west by Kilconquhar. The burgh is governed by three bailies, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The principal employment of the inhabitants is fishing. The parish church stands on a hill above the village, and dates back to the 13th century: there are also United Free and Congregational churches. Newark Castle, the ruins of which stand on an eminence near the church, was at one time the seat of David Leslie, 5th son of the Hon. Sir Patrick Leslie, kt. of Pitcairrie, and commendator of Lindores; having served under Gustavus Adolphus, he was appointed a major-general in the Scottish forces, under the Earl of Leven, sent in 1644 to help the English Parliamentarians during the Civil war; in 1650, on the invasion of Scotland by Cromwell, Leslie hemmed him in at Dunbar, and, but for the interference of the clerical party, would have been the victor; he subsequently fought at Worcester, and at the Restoration was created Baron Newark, a title which became extinct on the death of the 2nd baron, 15 May, 1694. Up to 1646 this parish was known as Abercrombie or Invery, but has since been called by the name of its kirk. Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. of Balcasie and William Baird esq. of Elie, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,203 acres; rateable value, £7,146; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,998, and in 1901, 2,007, and of the burgh, 1,898.

STRATHMIGLO is a burgh of barony and a parish in the north-western portion of the county, 2 miles south-west of Auchtermuchty, 3 north-west from Falkland and 8 north-west from Kinross, with a station on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British railway. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by parts of Abernethy and Arngask, west and south-west by Kinross-shire, south-east by Falkland and north-east by Auchtermuchty; it is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty. The burgh consists of two portions, Cashfeus and Strathmiglo, and has two principal streets, with several diverging lanes. The Town house, which stands near the centre of the principal street, has a square tower, with a balustraded parapet, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly 80 feet high. On the front of the tower is a stone sundial, now much defaced; and above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By a charter granted in 1600 the detached portions of Feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI. in 1605, but the nomination of bailies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. On the opposite side of the Miglo is the village of the Feus of Osh, and between the old town and this village is a level meadow called Town green, intersected by the Miglo and belonging to the burgh. The principal trade is the manufacture of linen, and there is also a large bleach works. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June. Lord Ninian Edward Crichton-Stuart, of Falkland, Charles J. Maitland-McGill, Crichton esq. of Lathrisk, William B. Skene esq. D.L., J.P. of Pitlour House, and George Ronald Hamilton Cheape esq. of Wellfield, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,162 acres; rateable value, £12,980; the population in 1891 was 1,753, and in 1901, 1,613, including 960 in the burgh.

Gate-ile is a village in the parish of Strathmiglo, distant 2 miles west from the village, with a station on the Fife and Kinross section of the North British railway, and contains a United Free church and a board school.

WITH THE PARISH OF FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG.

TAYPORT, known originally as South
 Ferry, then successively Ferry of Scots-
 craig and Ferry-port-on-Craig (a name now confined to the parish in which the town is situated), is a seaport town and police burgh
 and was made such in the year 1867,
 and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. Many houses and villas
 have been erected on the slopes of the Tay,
 commanding a fine prospect of the opposite
 shore; it has become to some extent a residential suburb of Dundee, and is situated on the Firth of Tay, opposite to Broughty Ferry, at about a mile distance
 by water, 11 miles north-by-east from Cupar, and 5 south-east from Dundee; it has a station on the St. Andrews,
 Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and is connected by a branch with the Tay bridge. For facilitating the shipping of goods, the railway company have constructed a dock and a pier, which can be approached by steamers at certain times of the tides.
 There are two factories here for the spinning
 of yarns and the manufacture of linen and
 jute goods, also a foundry, engine works,
 and an extensive timber yard and works,
 which provide employment for many of the inhabitants. The North of Scotland Bank Limited has a branch here. The salmon fishery, which is co-extensive with the coast line of the parish, is actively pursued
 during the season, the fish being mostly
 sent to the London markets; mussel
 dredging is also carried on extensively
 in the season. Tayport, with the parish,
 was originally an estate of the bishops of St. Andrews, and having in the reign of Alexander III. been feued to Sir Michael Scott, better known as "the Wizard," acquired the name of Scotsraig. The parish church was built in 1794, rebuilt
 in 1825, and renovated in 1882; there are also Free churches, two United Presbyterian churches and a Baptist chapel.

Ferry-port-on-Craig as a parish is from 4 to 5 miles in length and from half a mile to a mile in breadth, stretching along
 the south margin of the Tay to its mouth,
 where it empties itself into the North Sea.
 It was erected into a separate parish in 1606, having up to that time formed part of Leuchars; part of Tentsmuir forms the eastern portion of it, but this district is now a desolate sandy waste. The land
 rises to a hilly range extending westwards,
 and is bounded on the south by the
 parishes of Forgan and Leuchars, and on the north by the river Tay. The estate of Scotsraig, which comprises the whole
 parish, was formerly the property of Archbishop Sharp, of St. Andrews, of whose house some remains can still be traced.
 The present mansion house of Scotsraig,
 built in 1807, stands amidst fine plantations and well laid-out grounds, and is
 the property and residence of William Maitland-Douglis, Commander R.N., D.L., J.P. The area of the parish comprises 2,804 acres; assessable value, £13,788;

area of burgh, 392 acres. The population of the parish in 1891 was 3,008, and in 1901, 3,345, including 3,325 in the burgh.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles south-west of Dunfermline, and 17 south-west from Kirkcaldy. The parish, formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Crombie, extends for 5 miles along the Firth of Forth, and is about 1½ broad; it lies within the parliamentary division of West Fife, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and is bounded north by Saline parish, west by Perthshire, and east by Inverkeithing and Dunfermline. The nearest railway stations are at Oakley and East Grange, on the Dunfermline, Alloa and Stirling section of the North British railway. The inhabitants at one time were chiefly employed in weaving, but this branch of industry has become extinct. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but there is a pier at Crombie point, where steamers can land goods and passengers. The collieries of the Coltness Iron Co. Ltd. situated at East Grange in this parish, find employment for most of the inhabitants. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village, is that of Low Torry. It is a very pretty village, having Torry Bay in front, with comparatively high back grounds protecting it from the north wind. Crombie Castle, in this parish, is the residence of William Mathewson esq. Archibald Dominic Smith-Sligo esq. of Inzievar, Oakley, Lady Marindin, of Craigflower, B. W. P. Campbell-Preston esq. and John Allan Maconochie-Wellwood esq. J.P. of Pitliver House, Dunfermline, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 3,410 acres; rateable value in 1907, £8,582. The population in 1891 was 913, and in 1901, 1,130, including 656 in the village.

TOWNHILL, see DUNFERMLINE.

TULLIALLAN is a parish, formerly included as part of Perthshire, though locally situated in Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 13 December, 1890, and confirmed 23rd February, 1891; it is in the poor combination of Stirling and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and contains the town of Kincardine (or Kincardine-on-Forth), and extends about 5 miles from north to south by 2 in breadth. It is bounded on the north and east by the parishes of Saline and Culross, and south and west by the river Forth and part of Clackmannanshire. There is an Established church here; the old church, which remains standing in the burial ground, is a ruin, the steeple, however, being perfect. Tulliallan Castle, the seat of the Hon. Sir James Sivewright K.C.M.G. who is lord of the manor, is a modern mansion close to the ruins of the ancient castle. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., P.C. Lord Balfour of Burleigh K.T., P.C. and Laurence Johnston esq. of Sands, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,685 acres; rateable value, £9,000; the population in 1891 was 2,177 and in 1901, 1,862, of which 1,627 are in the town of Kincardine.

WELLWOOD, see DUNFERMLINE.WEMYSS,*WITH THE VILLAGES OF EAST AND WEST WEMYSS.

WEMYSS is a parish which comprises the villages of East and West Wemyss, the Coalton of Wemyss, Kirkland and Methil-hill and the Police Burgh of Buckhaven, Methil and Innerleven, in the Kirkcaldy district. The parish is bounded on the north by Kennoway and Markinch, on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the east by Scoonie, and on the west by Dysart; its length is 6 miles east to west, and a mile and a half in breadth. There are four stations in this parish on the branch of the North British railway, which runs from Thornton Junction to Methil, and the Anstruther and St. Andrews line skirts the northern border of the parish; the Wemyss tramways also run through the parish between Kirkcaldy and Leven. Coal is abundant, and is extensively wrought. A large portion of the Wemyss estate consists of coal seams of various depths, and a very large quantity of coal is yet unexcavated. In West Wemyss the coal trade has considerably increased, and several pits have been opened at Muir-edge, besides one between the Castle and East Wemyss. Within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns a height above the shore, to the east of East Wemyss, commanding a most extensive view seaward. Near Macduff's Castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, which have evidently been formed by the action of the sea at a very remote period; one of these caves is called the "King's Cave," from the tradition that James V. once joined an encampment of gypsies here. The formation of the caves themselves is a result of the extraordinary force of the sea rolling in upon the new red sandstone rocks forming this part of the Fife coast from the German Ocean. One of them, immediately under Macduff's Castle, is so narrow at the mouth that it is difficult to enter, but it expands so as easily to contain 100 persons. Another near is about fifty feet in height, with a roof formed like a cupola. A third, still larger, between East and West Wemyss, and termed the "Glass Cave," was used at the end of the 18th century for the manufacture of glass from kelp formed from the seaweed. The land generally is in an excellent state of cultivation. This place gives the title of earl to the Wemyss-Charteris-Douglas family, also Earls of March (1697), Barons Elcho, and Wemyss, of Elcho, 1628, in the peerage of Scotland, and Baron Wemyss, of the United Kingdom, 1821. There are United Free and Established churches in the village. Randolph Gordon Erskine-Wemyss esq. D.L., J.P. of Wemyss Castle, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 4,732 acres; rateable value, landward, £72,123; burghal (Buckhaven and Methil), £44,594. The population in 1891 was 9,955, and in 1901 was: Buckhaven, Methil and Innerleven police burgh, 8,210; beyond police burgh, 618; East Wemyss town, 2,528 and landward, 3,675; total, 15,031.

East Wemyss is a village in the parish of Wemyss, one mile north-east from West Wemyss, 5 north-east from Kirkcaldy, and 3 north-east from Dysart, situated on the Firth of Forth. In this village the manufacture of linen fabrics is carried on extensively, the factory of Messrs. G. & J. Johnston containing between two and three hundred power looms; there is also a brewery and malting house. Population in 1901, 2,532.

West Wemyss is a village, a mile west from East Wemyss, 4 north-east from Kirkcaldy, 5 south-west from Leven, and 2

north-east from Dysart: it is in the parish of Wemyss, and is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer. The harbour is situated at its western extremity, and has several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short distance east of the village, on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the seat of Randolph Gordon Erskine-Wemyss esq. D.L., J.P. who is the sole proprietor of the parish, and the representative of the oldest family in the county. The Established church is the only place of worship. There is also a school here. Population in 1901, 1,253.

Kirkland is a village in the parish; population in 1901, 361.

FORFARSHIRE, OR ANGUS,

A maritime county on the east coast, is bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the west and south-west by Perthshire, on the south, south-east and east by the Firth of Tay and North Sea, and on the north-east by Kincardineshire; its extent from north to south is about 38 miles, and from east to west 36, with 45 miles of coast line. The figure of this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scotland. The area is 8,737 square miles or 559,171 acres of land; of these there are about 300,000 cultivated and 260,000 uncultivated, and 3,294 of water; the portion occupied by the lakes is inconsiderable. In size Forfarshire is classed as the eleventh, and in population as the fourth of the Scottish counties. The population in 1891 was 277,735, and in 1901, 284,082, being 127,695 males and 156,387 females; the inhabited houses being 59,656 in 1891, and in 1901 inhabited, 65,205; uninhabited, 4,905, and building, 401.

Early History.—The district of Angus (now Forfarshire), with the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, anciently formed the country of the "Horesti," and a portion of the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that government by Kenneth II., about the end of the 9th century, he is said to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and Mearns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of Earl to two different families; on the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a relation of King David Bruce, and in 1477 it merged in the family of the Douglasses; it has since devolved on the Duke of Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in this county, most of which have fallen to decay, in consequence of the baronies on which they stand having passed into the hands of the proprietors of other estates. There are also remains of forts, the principal ones being at Castle-Finhaven, Dundee, Law, Monifieth, Dumbarrow and Caerbudd.

Soil, Surface and Produce.—The great level valley of Strathmore runs through the centre of the county from east to west, and the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract of country, with the Grampians on the north and some minor ranges on the south, may be said to form this district into a series of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from west to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers and streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest altitude in the shire are—Hill of Dundee, 525 feet; Dunnichin Hill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,609; Oathlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264; and Mount-Battock, 2,465 feet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian mountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys, and from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the east, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may be considered an inclined plane. From the aerial region of the highest Grampian an extensive and well varied prospect is presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining the Tay and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the peninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian, and the heights of Lammernoor. From the mouth of the Tay to near the Westhaven, the coast is sandy, having, from thence eastward, many sunken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore becomes bold and rocky, presenting precipices to the sea, perforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious workings of the waves; the "Redhead," a promontory upwards of 200 feet in perpendicular height, is the most striking feature of this rocky front; it forms the southern point of Lunan Bay, and exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly three miles. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued for centuries in a dormant state, but it has now a practically enlightened system of farming. The farmers of this county have kept at least equal pace in the improvements adopted with those of similarly situated divisions of the country. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded with to a great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly that of Rescobie, have been drawn off for the purpose of obtaining shell-marl, which has long been in high repute with the agriculturists, and the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most gratifying results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in, and the quantity of ground appropriated to tillage is annually increasing. Wheat and beans are also grown, but only in the more favoured localities. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1905," are oats, 49,033 acres; barley or bere, 28,628; wheat, 8,322; beans, 338; rye, 724; total corn crops, 87,074 acres; turnips and swedes, 32,252; potatoes, 14,852; cabbages &c. 295; vetches, 374; total green crops, 47,930 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 21,861 acres; (not for hay), 65,852; permanent pastures (for hay), 1,946; (not for hay), 24,759 acres; small fruit, 374 acres. The total area of land is 559,171, of which 179,874 are mountain and heathland (used for grazing), and 32,068 acres of woods and plantations. In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye, and excellent roads have been formed. The planting of waste lands seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century, Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations, but more recent planters introduced the larch as a valuable specie of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation; but experience has proved that by the operation of draining the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively. The polled black Angus cattle, now less common than at one time, have given place to other breeds, and many young and lean cattle are imported from Ireland. Numbers of black-faced sheep are reared on the hills. The live stock comprised in 1905 8,507 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,725; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 12,761; other cattle, 42,864; ewes kept for breeding, 61,917; other sheep, 103,516; sows kept for breeding 1,160; other pigs, 5,721. The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance, those of the North and South Esk, and the coast of the county, are at the present time very valuable; and the mode of packing salmon in ice, for the London market, is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery. Haddock, cod, ling, soles, halibut, turbot &c. are also caught, and during July and August the fishermen are engaged in fishing for herring, of which large numbers are taken off the north-east coast. The fishing boats registered in the county, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," at Arbroath, are, 107 boats, 1,185 tons, 445 hands; Dundee, 183 boats, 2,038 tons, 543 hands; Montrose, 248 boats, 3,297 tons, 1,091 hands.

Manufactures and Minerals.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabric, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarse hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials; the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on very extensively. Dundee, Arbroath and Montrose are its principal trading ports; the two first-named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, Osnaburgs, sackings, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose and Kirriemuir are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth, and in the process of bleaching. Besides the branches above mentioned, there are also many engineering works, breweries, tanneries, paper works, distilleries, and starch and tobacco manufactories. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. The output from quarries worked under the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1905 was, brick clay, 2,200 tons; igneous rocks, 52,842 tons; and sandstone, 91,509 tons.

Rivers, Lochs and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county, in the Braes of Angus; the first-named being formed by the Mark and the Lee (which latter river runs through Loch Lee), receiving the Tarf, Westwater, Cruick and Luther, and debouching into the North Sea 3 miles north of Montrose. The South Esk rises on the north-west border, and, passing south-east nearly through the centre of the county, is fed by the Norah, Lemno, Carity and Prosen, and reaches the sea at Montrose; there is a third river of some size, the Isla, which rises near the west border and flowing south-east receives the Dean, Carreet and Glamis, and turning west near Alyth, joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan. The former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty Ferry; the latter conveys the waters of the lakes of Rescobie and Belgavies to the sea at Lunan Bay. The Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different varieties of the trout and salmon. The Tay skirts the southern portion, and is the great cause of the commercial prosperity of Dundee; it rises in the western part of Perthshire, a little east of Perth city it becomes an estuary or frith, and about 8 miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, in which is placed the Bell Rock light. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town; the Lochs of Rescobie and Lintrathen, in the respective parishes so denominated; and of Belgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent. The railways are confined to the southern and eastern portions of the county, where they connect the different towns with Aberdeen on the north and Edinburgh and Glasgow on the south. These lines are chiefly part of the Caledonian Railway system, the main line of which enters the county a little east of upar Angus, and at Alyth Junction, south of Ruthven, it sends a branch to the north-west to Alyth and one south-east-by-south to Dundee, the main line proceeding on to Forfar (from which place is a line to Kirriemuir) where also a line from Dundee, via Broughty Ferry, comes in on the south, thence to Guthrie, whence a branch goes south-east to Arbroath; the next junction is at Dubton, where the Montrose line joins, after which the Caledonian leaves the county, near Craigo; the North British enters at Broughty Ferry, whence the line which belongs to the Caledonian from Dundee becomes joint property as far as Arbroath, and from thence the North British passes through Lunan Bay to Montrose, and on to Marvirk and Aberdeen.

Divisions, Representations &c.—Forfarshire comprises 52 parishes, in which are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin and Forfar: the four last-named burghs, with Bervie (in Kincardineshire), designated Montrose District of Burghs, unite in sending one member to Parliament. Dundee, raised to the dignity of a city by royal charter, returns two, and the county one; the county parliamentary constituency in 1906 was 12,644.

ABERLEMNO is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Forfar, with a hamlet of the same name, 5 miles north-east from Brechin, the nearest railway station being at Aldbar, on the Caledonian railway, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles south, near the boundary of the par. sh. The parish is about 5 miles from north to south by 4 miles wide, and bounded on the north-east and east by the parish of Brechin, Guthrie on the south-east, Rescobie on the south-west, Oathlaw on the west, Tannadice on the north-west and Careson on the north. The river South Esk flows along the north boundary. The Established church here is a good building of stone, and there is also a Free church. Turin Hill, the highest elevation in the parish, is 826 feet above sea level. In the parish churchyard is an inscribed monolith, and a little to the north of the parish church are three others. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about 2 miles north-east from the church are the ruins of Melgund Castle, supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vittrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the parish church. The Earl of Minto G.M.S.T., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., P.C., V.D. and Viceroy of India, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,914 acres; rateable value, £7,421; the population was in 1801, 926, and in 1901, 804.

AIRLIE (formerly Airly) is a parish with a kirktown, about 5 miles west from Kirriemuir, 10 miles north-west from Forfar and 5 miles north-east from Alyth, in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire, and in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir; its length from north-east to south-by-west is about 6 miles, with a breadth varying from 4 to $\frac{3}{4}$ miles, and it is bounded on the north by Lintathen and Kingoldrum, on the east by Kirriemuir and Glamis, on the south by Eassie and Meikle and on the west by Aylth and Ruthven; part of the line or boundary being formed by the river Isla and its tributaries, the Melgam and the Dean. The nearest railway stations are Eassie and Glamis, on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway; each about 4 miles south-west and south-east respectively from Airlie kirktown. Here are Established and United Free churches. Within the parish is situated Airlie Castle, the ancient seat of the Ogilvys, Earls of Airlie; much frequented in the summer months by visitors, the public being admitted on Tuesdays and Saturdays. Of the ancient structure only the front wall and entrance tower, the arch of which still retains its portcullis, have been preserved; these are incorporated in the modern mansion, now the residence of the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Lindertis is the property of Sir Campbell Munro bart. D.L., J.P. of Lyme Begis, Dorset, who is the principal landowner; the tutors of the Earl of Airlie (a minor), the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, John Andrew Wedderburn-Ogilvy esq. J.P. of Meikle, Capt. G. D. Clayhills Henderson R.N. of Invergordie, and Edward Cox esq. of Cardean, are also landowners. The area of the parish comprises 8,923 acres; rateable value, £8,266; the population in 1891 was 741, in 1901, 698.

ARBIRLOT is a parish and village, the former bounded on the east by the German Ocean, north by Arbroath and St. Vigeans, west by Carmyllie and south by Panbride parishes; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath and extends 4 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The village has a station on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway (Carmyllie branch), and another station 2 miles east of the church, called Elliot Junction. The village, which is 3 miles west of Arbroath and 14 north-east from Dundee, is on the east bank of the Elliot burn, from which the old name of the parish (Aberelliot) was derived. About a quarter of a mile south-east of the village stands Kelly Castle, which originally belonged to the family of Ouchterlony, and is now held by the trustees of the late Earl of Dalhousie; it is at present tenanted by Mrs. David Corsar. The surface of the land is flat and along the sea coast the soil is sandy; inland it is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,747 acres; rateable value, £3,815; the population in 1891 was 848, and in 1901, 800.

ARBROATH,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF ST. VIGEANS AND VILLAGE OF MARYWELL.

ARBROATH is a royal burgh, a seaport and the seat of a presbytery, 60 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 110 north-east from Glasgow, 17 north-east from Dundee, 16 south-east from Forfar and 12 south from Montrose, situated on a small plain on the coast of the German Ocean, and on both sides of the river Brothock where it flows into the sea. It has a station, which is a junction for the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar Joint railway of the Caledonian and North British lines with the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. The harbour is extensive, and has been greatly improved, at a cost of more than £20,000; steamers of a fairly large size frequent the port. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1906, with cargoes and in ballast, was, British, 5 of 3,890 tons; foreign, 14 of 2,644 tons. The number of British and foreign cleared was 3 of 438 tons. In the coasting trade 216 entered of 14,329 tons, and 155 cleared of 18,504 tons. The total value of the imports in 1906 was £7,048 and exports, £4,926.

At the commencement of the 18th century, Arbroath had but little trade, nothing being then directly imported except occasional cargoes of wood from Norway; wax, iron and other useful commodities being purchased from the merchants in Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced, and the staple trade of Arbroath at the present day is the manufacture of sail cloth and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns of these productions of the loom is carried on extensively by many firms and individuals. Jute spinning has also been introduced, but is of small extent compared with flax spinning. In addition to the linen trade there are various concerns of magnitude, including engineering works, iron foundries, a tannery, large and flourishing boot and shoe manufactories, roperies &c. and a good trade exists in the exportation of grain and potatoes. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a bank for savings. This town was gifted to the abbey of Aberbrothock (founded in 1178 by William the Lion), and the abbey was erected into a burgh of regality and received a charter as a royal burgh in 1599. The existing remains of the abbey comprise the south gable of the transept, the north-west tower, about 70 feet high, portions of the chapter house, and the west door and the gate house, with its crow-stepped gable, the style is Early English and Transitional, and has some remarkable arcading in the lower stories. A part of the abbot's lodgings is also extant. In this house King Robert the Bruce was frequently entertained by the abbot, who was also Chancellor of Scotland. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginald (a monk of Tyrone) was first abbot. The abbey was very extensively endowed with lands and other gifts by Kings William I., Alexander II. and Robert I. and their nobility. It possessed 46 parish churches, and extensive lands in several counties, particularly in the north of Scotland, with privileges of regality &c. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempt from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London.

Arbroath is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 12 councillors. There is a guildry and a body of seven incorporated trades, but these are now virtually private bodies. This town unites with Forfar, Montrose, Brechin and Bervie in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. Arbroath is the seat of a sheriff court for the district. The court sits weekly, on Wednesday, during session. Police courts are also held weekly, or oftener when necessary, and burgh and justice of peace courts are also held. The parish of Arbroath is now a joint parish with St. Vigeans for administrative purposes, by Order which took effect from the 15th July, 1895; they are in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. There are many well built streets, the principal business streets being High street, Keptie street and West port. The town has been greatly improved by paving and sewerage, and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops, and possesses several good hotels, the principal being the White Hart. The Victoria Park, adjoining the cliffs on the north-east side of the town, was opened in 1897 in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The Town House was built in 1812, and in rear of it are commodious market buildings, erected about 1855 by the magistrates and town council, at an outlay of about £7,000. A large public hall, with subsidiary rooms, in High street, was built in 1866 by an incorporated company. The poorhouse, situated in an elevated and healthy suburb of the town, was erected in 1866. A Free Public Library was opened June 4th, 1898 in the building formerly the High School, purchased by David Corsar esq. of The Elms, and by him presented to the town, Andrew Carnegie esq. contributing £1,000 towards the library. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January for general business and hiring servants; on the 28th May, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring; July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday) for general business and hiring; and 28th November, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring. Two newspapers are published in the town, the "Arbroath Guide" (every Saturday) and the "Arbroath Herald" (every Thursday).

Arbroath is the seat of a presbytery (No. 52), which meets on first Tuesday of February, April, May, July, September and December; it has, with the joint parish of St. Vigeans, six Established places of worship, nine United Free churches, and also Baptist, Congregational, Evangelical Union, Wesleyan Methodist, Original Apostolic, Roman Catholic and Catholic Apostolic chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1855, will seat 568 persons. The parish church (with the exception of the steeple) was totally destroyed by fire in November, 1892, but was rebuilt in 1895, at a cost of £10,000, in the Early Pointed style, from designs by John James Burnet esq. A.R.S.A. of Glasgow; the former steeple, built in 1832, and 150 feet in height, remains; the east window is a memorial to John Macdonald esq. town clerk and his wife; the carved oak pulpit was presented by the Young Men's Guild. The High school, in Keptie road, at the west end of the town, on seven acres of ground, feued from the Hospital-field Trustees, was erected in 1895 at a cost of £12,000, and is in the Elizabethan style, from plans by Messrs. Carver and Symon, Arbroath, and includes a large mechanical workshop. The endowments, including a grant from the County Committee, amount to about £665 per annum; there are about 80 free scholarships for children from Arbroath and the neighbouring parishes, 8 Gibson scholarships, and 4 bursaries of £15 each, given by the Educational Trust; the school is in charge of a rector and a large staff of teachers, and is under the management of the School board. The Arbroath and District Isolation Hospital for Infectious Diseases, on the Forfar road, was begun in 1901, at an estimated cost of £10,000, from designs by Mr. Hugh Gavin, architect, of Arbroath, and opened in 1904; it contains 45 beds, and is under the joint governorship of the Arbroath Town Council and the Arbroath District members of the County Council.

The local charities of the town include the Infirmary and Dispensary at High Common, with an Epidemic Hospital near, two destitute sick societies; and a number of mortifications, viz.: Carmichael's, founded in 1738, for seven widows of ship masters; Colvill's, founded in 1812, providing £60 annually for the education of ten poor children; £10 for Scotch Episcopal clergymen; £10 for the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue to 20 poor householders; Dove's, founded in 1841, for the education of "native born boys," of poor parentage; Mrs. Renny Strachan's, of £50 yearly, for providing coals and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas amongst the most necessitous poor; Forbes's Fund, founded in 1864, from which sums of not less than £8 nor more than £10 yearly are given for the relief of destitute widows and old unmarried females in the town of Arbroath; the Gibson Fund, founded in 1863, and consisting of the annual produce of the residue of the trust estate of William Gibson, and applied as follows:—£100 to the rector of the High school for the education of eight boys, and the remainder to be divided yearly in sums of not less than £20 and not more than £25 among poor householders of the town of Arbroath, preference being given to respectable worthy people of fallen fortunes; the Gibson Christmas Charity, founded in 1868, and being the annual revenue of a sum of £2,000, is applied in the purchase of coals, groceries, oatmeal and clothes for distribution among the necessitous poor of the town; the Gibson Mortification, founded in 1868, and consisting of the annual revenue of a sum of £4,000, divided yearly among 16 poor householders; the Petrie Gift, a fund supposed to amount to about £2,000, bequeathed in 1875, by Mr. William Petrie, manufacturer, to be distributed in £10 shares among "poor, deserving women of respectable character, being in and belonging to, and at the time resident in the parish of St. Vigeans, and who have not been in receipt of parochial relief for the preceding five years at least"; the Duncan Charity, founded in 1869, and consisting of the annual profits of three-eighths of the residue of the estates of the late David Duncan, for the behoof of poor, aged and reduced persons not being objects of parochial relief; the Arbikie Fund, bequeathed by John Mudie, of Pitmuies, being the personal estate of his sister, the late Miss Catherine Mudie, of Arbikie, to which he had succeeded, the free revenue being divided into annuities of £40 each, among deserving persons residing in the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans; and Arrott's Mortification, bequeathed by the late Dr. James Arrott, of Dundee, and being a capital sum amounting to about £6,000, the free revenue of which is annually distributed in annuities of about £6 each.

The land in the neighbourhood of Arbroath slopes gradually upwards from the shore; the surrounding country is agricultural and for the most part very fertile, the soil, though varied, being excellently adapted for all the different grain and other crops usually grown in Scotland. About a mile north-east the coast becomes very bold, rocky and perpendicular, and contains a number of caves and arches perforated by the action of the waves; these are a great attraction to visitors, having been rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott in his "Antiquary." Near the harbour at Lady Loan is a signal tower for communication with the Bell (or Inch Cape) Rock, which rises from the German Ocean, about 12 miles in a south-easterly direction from Arbroath. On "the rock" is a lighthouse, the first stone on which was laid in July, 1808, and the light was first shown 1st Feb. 1811: at the lighthouse there are a principal lightkeeper and three assistants; at the signal tower, on shore, each keeper has apartments for his family; the tower is about 80 feet in height and is furnished with an excellent telescope. Signals are arranged with the persons at the lighthouse on the rock by the lightkeeper on shore daily at nine in the morning, weather permitting: communication is by steamer from Granton. The traditional story connected with the Inchcape Rock is well known through Southey's popular ballad. Hospitalfield, the mansion of the late Patrick Allan Fraser esq. H.R.S.A. is now a school of art, and has for its object the art education of a limited number of young men who have insufficient means of their own, and who intend to make art a profession. Students who show sufficient promise are permitted to study at the college without payment for tuition, and receive board or lodging for a period not exceeding 4 years from the date of their admission: the building contains many art treasures, and is open to the public once a week during the summer months: it was the Monkbarns of the "Antiquary." The trustees of the late Patrick Allan Fraser esq. of Hospitalfield, and the representatives of John Jamieson esq. of Denfield, are the principal landowners of Arbroath parish; and Conway Grant Fletcher esq. of Letham Grange, St. Vigeans, Sir Leonard Lyell bart. of Kinnordy, the Earl of Northesk, the Hon. Frederick John Bruce, of Seaton, A. R. Duncan esq. of Parkhill, F. F. Macdonald esq. of Lochlands, C. C. R. S. Carnegie esq. of Tarris, and Sir Reginald H. A. Ogilvy bart. of Baldovan, par. St. Vigeans. The area of the burgh is 1,096 acres; rateable value (parliamentary and royal), £95,083; the population in 1891 was 22,987 and in 1901 was 22,546 in the parliamentary, royal and municipal burgh: the population of the wards (exclusive of shipping) in 1901 was: Abbey, 4,873; Guthrie Port, 4,093; High Street, 3,552; Keptie, 2,583; Lochlands, 3,775; Millgate, 3,399; the area of the united parish of Arbroath and St. Vigeans, including the burgh, is 12,752 acres; the rateable value, £19,917; railways, 1,915, with a population of 2,279.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 3,413. St. Vigeans is a parish, 8 miles from east to west by 4 in depth, lying north of that of Arbroath, with which, by an Order dated 28 May, 1895, it is incorporated for administrative purposes, and contains the villages of St. Vigeans, Auchmithie, and Marywell and half the town of Arbroath; it is bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Inverkeilor and south-west by Carmyllie, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The Arbroath railway station is in this parish. The Established church here dates from the 12th century. The name by which this parish is now known is that of a famous hermit who had his chapel and hermitage at the Grange of Conan, near to which was a baronial castle, named Gory, or Gregory. From Whiting Ness, and as far as Auchmithie, the coast is very rugged and precipitous (gradually rising to Dickmontlaw Hill, 250 feet above the sea level) and contains a number of caves and arched rocks, some of which may be passed through in boats and others on foot; these form a great attraction, and are much visited. The stream of the Brothock flows through the parish and passes through the town of Arbroath, entering the sea at its harbour. The population in 1901 of the ecclesiastical parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans is

3,971 and 1,215 respectively, and the following quoad sacra parishes have been formed out of the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans: Ladyloan, population 4,634; Abbey, 5,663; Inverbrothock, 4,976; St. Margarets, 3,353; Colliston, 549, and Auchmithie, 389. Letham Grange, in the parish of St. Vigeans, the residence of Conway Grant Fletcher esq. is a large mansion in the Grecian style, situated about 3 miles north from Arbroath. Post, T. M. O., S. AUCHMITHIE. a quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parish of St. Vigeans and a village, situated on the shore of a small harbour for fishing boats, on the east coast, about 3¼ miles north from Arbroath, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The harbour, towards the construction of which the Fishery Board of Edinburgh made a grant of £3,900, cost in all £5,200. The coast here consists of bold rocky cliffs. Arbroath and Letham Grange, on the North British Coast line from Arbroath to Montrose, are the nearest railway stations, and are distant 3

AUCHTERHOUSE, is a parish in the south of the county, to the south of the Sidaw Hills, its kirk town being 7 miles north-west of Dundee, it is bounded on the north by Glamis, east and south-east by Tealing, Strathmartine and Liff, and west and south-west by Newtyle and Lundie; it is in the Dundee small debt court district, and has a station 1 mile west from the village on the Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway, there is also another station at Dronley; on the same branch. The village is lighted with oil lamps by the parish council. The Dronley burn and the road from Dundee to Meigie pass through the parish, which has an Established church, built in 1775. The Sidlaw Sanatorium, at Auchterhouse, a hospital for consumption, was opened by the Countess of Airlie in 1902; Lord Provost Longair, president; John A. Turnbull, interim hon. sec.; R. Murray, hon. treasurer; A. K. Traill M.B., Ch.B.Edin. medical supt.; Miss Wilson, matron. The soil is chiefly black land and the country hilly. The Earl of Camperdown, the Earl of Airlie, George Willsher esq. and D. S. Cowans esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,188 acres; rateable value, £10,721; population in 1891, 532; in 1901, 547 civil and 521 ecclesiastical.

BARNHILL, see BROUGHTY FERRY.

BARRY (or Barrie) is a parish and village, the former extending about 4 miles from north to south by 3½ from east to west, and situated in the south-east angle of the county, and at the mouth of the Tay, which bounds it on the south, the eastern boundary being the North Sea, and the western Monifieth; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains the village and kirktown of Barry and two-thirds of the burgh of Carnoustie, at which town and at Barry are stations on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway. The village is 9 miles north-east from Dundee and 8 south-west from Arbroath, and contains an Established church, a United Free church and a school. The soil is sandy and the country undulating. The Earl of Dalhousie, of Brechin Castle, John Miln esq. of Grange of Barry, and the trustees of Mrs. Lingard Guthrie, of Carnoustie, are the principal landowners. The extensive links in this parish were acquired by the government in 1892, at a cost of £48,000, as a training ground for military purposes; its artillery range is one of the best land ranges in Britain, and the ground is otherwise very suitable for manoeuvres, rifle practice and encamping, it being easy of access by rail and water. A Soldiers' Home has now been erected for the benefit of the men while in camp. At Buddonness, on the southern extremity of the parish, are two light-houses, and close by is a lighthouse to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay. The area of the parish comprises 5,328 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £7,120; burgh, £21,961; the population in 1891 was 3,787, and in 1901, 4,652, including 4,073 persons in the burgh of Carnoustie.

Post Office (Barry Village); John Smith, sub-postmaster. Letters through Carnoustie S.O. (Forfarshire). Deliveries, 7.25 a.m. & 5 p.m.; dispatched, 1.30 & 5 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. Nearest money order & telegraph office is at the Barry Camp office, 1 mile distant.

BRECHIN.

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery and of a bishopric, and the head of a poor combination and small debt court district, 11 miles north-east from Forfar and 70 north-by-east from Edinburgh, situated on the north bank of the South Esk, with a terminal station on a branch line from Bridge of Dun, of the north-eastern section of the Caledonian railway. Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and the broils of civil wars; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge, the plague. Formerly the city was walled, but the walls and gates have been long removed. An interesting fragment remains of the hospital of Maison Dieu, founded by William of Brechin in 1264. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by a ravine, stands Brechin Castle, an ancient seat of the Maules of Pannure, now represented by the

Earl of Dalhousie; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream, and in 1303 sustained a siege of 20 days from the English army under Edward I. but Sir Thomas Maule, its commander being killed, it surrendered: the south front, towards the river, incorporates some remains of the original structure, together with more recent work, including a square tower: the west front is more regular, and has round towers at the angles. This town has given birth to more men of genius and literary distinction than any place, in proportion to its size, in Scotland, among whom may be enumerated William Maitland F.R.S., F.S.A. the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London, who was born here c. 1693, and died at Montrose 16 July, 1757; John Gillies LL.D., F.R.S., P.S.A. the historian of Greece, b. 18 Jan. 1747, and d. at Clapham, 15 Feb. 1836; his brother, Lord Adam Gillies, Dr. Thomas Guthrie, b. 1800, and Colvin Smith, the eminent artist, to whom Sir Walter Scott sat on five different occasions. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master and seven councillors, who are also police commissioners. The burgh joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath and Inverberrie in returning one member to Parliament. A burgh or baillie court is held every Wednesday, and oftener when necessary; the magistrates are the judges: a justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday in every month, and a sheriff court on the third Tuesday of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims.

The see of Brechin was founded in 1150, by David I., who also richly endowed it, and the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, erected in the 13th century, originally consisted of an aisleless choir of uncertain length and a clerestoried nave of five bays with narrow aisles; the transepts, removed in 1806, do not appear to have formed part of the original plan, but to have been a later addition, and were small and of no great height: the north-west tower, with its projecting embattled parapet, turret and octagonal spire, dates from about the middle of the 15th century; the height to the top of the spire is nearly 130 feet, and there are 3 bells: the choir, up to the date of the recent restoration, lay in ruins. A fragment of a Celtic tomb slab, formerly on the floor of the choir, has been removed to the interior; in 1806 the church was to a large extent rebuilt in a very debased style, and greatly injured, the aisles being widened and raised so as to destroy the clerestory, galleries carried round the whole interior, and the east and west piers much injured by the erection of stone stairs: the west end of the south aisle now abuts on a fine round tower of the 11th century, 87 feet in height, and tapering slightly towards the top, and finished with a corbelled cornice and octagonal spire; the circular-headed entrance is about 6 feet from the ground, and has over it a figure of the "Crucifixion," and on either side rude carvings of bishops: the west doorway, recessed in six orders, is of the same period as the choir; the window over it displays rich flowing Decorated tracery: the extreme length of the church, excluding the bell tower, is 94 feet; originally, with the choir, it was about 180 feet: the communion plate is of beaten silver. The cathedral was extensively restored in 1900, under the direction of Mr. John Honeyman R.S.A. architect, of Glasgow, at a cost of over £13,000, mostly collected by public subscription. In the course of the reconstruction traces were found of a Norman church, probably built about 100 years after the tower, and demolished to make room for the existing building. The work of restoration including the rebuilding of (1) the whole of the aisle, walls and gables, (2) the erection of a new north aisle, called the Queen's aisle, (3) the rebuilding of the north porch, (4) the south transept, (5) more than half the choir, and (6) all the east gable. The windows of the choir are now filled with fine stained glass by Henry Holiday, of London. The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed after its promulgation in 1637: the bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. There is also an Established church for the East parish, and the Gardner memorial church, built in 1897-8, at a cost of £11,000, in memory of the late Rev. Alexander Gardner M.A. for 50 years minister of Brechin, and his son, James Alexander Gardner, advocate, of Edinburgh: £7,000 of the total cost was provided by the late Mrs. Milne and Miss Milne, of Mooranbank, Brechin.

There are also five United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, chapels for the Evangelical Union and Plymouth Brethren and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1811, will seat 416 persons: the rectory, net value £267, has been held since 1896 by the Rev. E. B. Cooke, of St. Bees.

The Municipal buildings, in Bank street, include a court room, council chamber &c. The Post Office and Parish Council chambers are in Panmure street. Flax spinning and the manufacture of linen and a paper mill employ numerous hands; there are also two distilleries and a brewery. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited are established here. A newspaper, entitled the "Brechin Advertiser," established in 1848, is published on Tuesday morning. The principal hotels are the Commercial and the Crown. The Mechanics' Institution, erected at the sole cost of the late Lord Panmure, is an edifice in the Tudor style, and has an embattled parapet with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to a height of 80 feet, and commands a fine prospect: the building contains an excellent library and reading and billiard rooms. Lord Panmure also presented to the institution numerous valuable paintings, and endowed it with £1,000 to be vested at interest, which now yields about £40 a year. The Public Library, near the Railway station, was erected with a sum of £5,000, given anonymously. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association, in Bank street, were built at a cost of £1,500, and opened in 1878. The Poorhouse, in Infirmary street, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £3,000, and is available for 100 persons; the Infirmary, close by, is a substantial-looking building of stone, erected in 1869, for 33 patients. The cemetery, approached from Panmure street, was opened in 1857 and enlarged in 1899. Trinity Muir, 1 mile north of the town, besides being the site of a fair, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer. The public park, off Park road, was opened in 1887, and subsequently enlarged to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria in 1897; in St. Ninian's square are gardens and walks well laid out. Fairs are held on the 3rd Thursday in June for cattle and horses and on the Tuesday after the 2nd Thursday in July for wool; hiring market on 1st Tuesday after 28th May and on Nov. 28th and first Tuesday in March for married ploughmen, which is called the "Cartie Market." The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and a local company conducts weekly a large sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish comprises 13,922 acres; rateable value, £17,937; the population in 1891 was 10,453, and in 1901 the figures were: royal, parliamentary and municipal burgh, 4,816; beyond royal, parliamentary and municipal, 4,125; landward, 1,503; total, 10,444. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: Brechin parish church, 6,763; East church, 1,794; Gardner Memorial, 1,887.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 1,359. Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, Panmure street, Brechin; James C. BROUGHTY-FERRY.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern town and police burgh, seated on the Firth of Tay, with stations on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway, about 4 miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-Port-on-Craig, or Tayport. The place takes its name from the old castle of Broughty or "Burgh Tay" (the defence of the Tay), situated on its south-eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water; the castle, formerly in ruins, has been made into a formidable defence for the mouth of the Tay. Broughty is divided into three districts, East Ferry and West Ferry and Barnhill: East Ferry and Barnhill are in the parish of Monifieth, and West Ferry in that of Dundee. The town, which is regularly built, and has improved very considerably, is in the small debts court district of Dundee, and is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates, under the provisions of the Police Act of 1892. It is lighted with gas and electric light from works owned by the commissioners, and is supplied with water from the Dundee waterworks. At one time the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach, but the population is now considerable, and the place is largely frequented during the summer months on account of its pleasant scenery, pure air and good bathing facilities. The pier, constructed in 1871 at a cost of about £3,800, projects into the river for about 200 feet due south, with a width of 30 feet; at the outer end of the pier is a wooden platform and slip, supported on piles, forming an angle running eastward in the direction of the North British railway pier, which gives it a semi-dock like appearance, and provides berthage for four or five small vessels: the slip is of a uniform breadth of 20 feet, running from the top of the pier down to low water, on a gentle decline; this arrangement permits vessels to lie by at low water, and allows the landing and embarking of passengers from small steamers at any state of tide. A storehouse, office and steelyard have also been added. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, or the Hill of Balgillo, on which fortifications were erected by the English in 1548, during the regency of the Earl of Arran, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1560 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans and French, under M. Des Thermies, were dismantled, and there are now only scattered remains. Here are two Established churches and a Mission church, five United Free churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels and three Mission halls. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1858, will seat 384 persons: the rectory, net value £360, has been held since 1870 by the Rev. G. Mackness D.D. of Lincoln College, Oxford, and canon of Dundee. The East United Free church, built in 1865, is an edifice in the Gothic style. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, and a Savings Bank, are established here. There are two public halls. The "Broughty-Ferry Guide" newspaper (1886) is published every Friday. There are two public parks, the Reres Hill Park and the Orchard Park, both opened in 1887, and each consisting of about 6½ acres. The principal seats are Forbes Court, the residence of the Rt. Rev. Walter John Forbes Robberds D.D. Bishop of Brechin; Carbet Castle, of Mrs. Grimond; Castleroy, of Mrs. S. Gilroy; Balgillo, of John C. Buist esq. J.P. and Dunalestair, the property of Alexander Bruce Gilroy esq. of Castleroy, but at present unoccupied. The area of the burgh is 1,454 acres; valuation, about £70,000. The population of the town in 1891 was 9,256, and in 1901, 10,484, viz.: first ward, 2,296; second ward, 2,308; third ward, 2,606; fourth ward, 3,272. The population of the ecclesiastical parish (parish church) in 1901 was 7,031, and of St. Stephen's ecclesiastical parish, 2,346.

Barnhill, one mile east from Broughty-Ferry, in Monifieth parish, and now included in that burgh, has a station on the Dundee and Forfar direct line, and is now a favourite place of residence. Here is an Established church, and a Convalescent Home in connection with the Dundee Royal Infirmary, erected in 1876, from funds left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and opened in March, 1877, and enlarged in 1899. There is a cemetery 8½ acres in extent.

CARESTON is a small parish about 2 miles by 1½, situated between the parishes of Brechin and Tannadice, 4 miles south-west of Brechin town, on the north bank of the South Esk; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Menmuir and Fern parishes respectively, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin. There is a station in the village on the Brechin and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. The castle of Careston, erected in the 13th or 14th century, and now the property and residence of William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. was formerly one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford: above the mantelpiece, in the old drawing room, are the royal CARMYLLIE is a parish 3 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth, and bounded by parts of 7 parishes, viz.: Panbride, Monikie, Dunnichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigean and Arbriot. The parish of Carmyllie includes the villages of Redford and Greystone, the former of which is about 4 miles south from Frickheim and about 6 west from Arbroath, having a station on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway (Carmyllie branch), and being in the Arbroath small debt court district. The river Elliot runs through the parish, and the surface is hilly with a fairly productive soil, and near are some large quarries of paving stone. Cattle sales are held in April and October. The Earl of Dalhousie, Lt.-Col. Thos. Heathcote Ouchterlony J.P. of The Gynnd, and Wm. Rettie esq. of Covonsyth, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,552 acres; rateable value, £6,958; the population in 1891 was 1,083, and in 1901, 1,063.

Post Office: Miss Susan Gibson, sub-postmistress. Letters through Arbroath. Delivery, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 1.5 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office & savings bank is at Frickheim, 4½ miles distant.

Post Office, Greystone: Mrs. Jas. Sturrock, sub-postmistress. Letters through Arbroath. Delivery, 10.5 a.m.; dispatch, 2 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Letham, 5 miles distant.

CARNOUSTIE is a thriving town on the North Sea and a police burgh, two-thirds of which are within the parish of Barry and the remainder, known as Newton and Westhaven portions, in the parish of Panbride; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it lies 6 miles south, and is 10 east-by-north from Dundee with a station on the joint line of the Caledonian and North British railways. The Bay, to the north-west of which the town stands, is large, but too open and shallow to be useful as a harbour. Carnoustie is now much resorted to as a watering-place and has good bathing and accommodation for visitors, besides golf clubs. The golf course is of 18 holes; there are also tennis courts and bowling greens. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. It is well drained, and supplied with water from the reservoir at Crombie, belonging to the Dundee Water Works. The large jute works of Messrs James Smieton and Sons employ about 400 hands, and there are also vitriol works, a large iron foundry, boot & shoe factories and vegetable preserve works. The Union Club Limited, in Park avenue, opened 2 Jan. 1899, was erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The Municipal offices in the High street were erected in 1897-8, at a cost, including furnishing, of £3,000, from designs by Mr. James P. Bruce, architect, Dundee and Carnoustie. There are two Established churches, three United Free churches and an Original Secession church: the Episcopal Church of the Holy Rood, built in 1881, will seat 274 persons, and attached to it is the Monifieth Mission. The area of the burgh is 550 acres; rateable value, £29,498, of which £21,961 is in Barry parish and £8,537 in Panbride parish; the population in 1891 was 4,134, and in 1901, 5,204 burgh, and 3,243 ecclesiastical.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I., Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office (Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed S.O. Forfarshire); John P. M. Lowson, postmaster. Arrivals, 6.45 to 10 a.m. & 4.10 & 7 p.m.; sundays, 12.30 to 1.30 p.m. callers only; dispatches, 7 & 10.10 a.m. & 1.25, 2.15, 3.20, 5.10, 7.5 & 8 p.m.; sundays, 9 a.m.

CRAICHIE, See DUNNICHEN.

CRAIG is a parish on the east coast, occupying the peninsula south of Montrose basin and the creek which connects that water with the sea, and bounded on the south by Lunan Bay, is 6 miles from east to west by 2½ from north to south; it is in the small debt court district of Montrose, and contains the fishing villages of Ferryden and Usan. The nearest railway station is at Montrose, 1 mile north, on the Caledonian and North British systems. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Templars' hall. Dunnald Castle is the residence of Capt. John Stansfeld J.P. and Rossie Castle, of Edward Millar esq. J.P.; these, with George Keith esq. J.P. of Usan House, are the principal landowners. (Inchbraylock, or Rossie islet, in the creek, now belongs to the parish of Montrose). The land is arable, with plenty of limestone. The area comprises 4,324 acres; rateable value, £11,010; the population in 1891 was 2,309, and in 1901, 2,019 civil and 2,179 ecclesiastical.

Ferryden is one of the largest fishing villages on the east coast of Scotland, with a population of 1,330 in 1901, 1,482 in 1891, and 1,520 in 1881, and owning boats and other fishing appliances to the extent of upwards of £35,000.

DUN is a parish, 4 miles in extent from east to west and 3½ from north to south, and is bounded on the north by Stracathro and Logie-Pert, on the south by Maryton and Farnell, on the west by Brechin and on the east by Montrose; it lies between Montrose and Brechin, being 4 miles east of the latter place, on the north bank of the South Esk, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is in the small debt court district of Montrose. The parish church is a plain stone building. The principal landowners are the Rt. Hon. James Alexander Campbell, of Stracathro, Sir George McPherson Grant of Ballindalloch, Augustus J. W. H. Kennedy-Erskine esq. of Dun house, and Augustus Walter Cruikshank esq. of Langley Park. Dun House, the property and residence of A. J. W. H. Kennedy-Erskine esq. is situated in grounds of about 1,500 acres and commands extensive views of the sea and surrounding country. The land is generally fertile. In the parish is a small lake, called Dun's Dish. Near the railway station is a bridge of three arches, erected in the year 1785-7, which crosses the South Esk river. The area comprises 4,306 acres; rateable value, £7,519; the population in 1891 was 552, and in 1901, 526.

DUNDEE.

DUNDEE is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, and since 1889 has been a city; it is second in point of commercial position and third in population in Scotland: the city lies on the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about 8 miles from the mouth of the Firth, and the parish, which is about 5 miles east to west and 3 north to south, is bounded on the south by the Tay, on the north by the united parishes of Mains and Strathmartine, on the east by Murroes and Monifieth, and on the west by the united parish of Luff, Benvie and Invergowrie, a large portion of which is incorporated with the burgh. The city is 43 miles north from Edinburgh, 66 south-south-west from Aberdeen, 29 south-west from Montrose, 22 east-by-north from Perth, 17 south-west from Arbroath and 14 south from Forfar. The Caledonian and North British railways have each stations in the city. The Caledonian railway system connects Dundee with Perth, Stirling and the west of Scotland generally, and London and the south by the West Coast line. One branch runs northward to Newtyle, Blairgowrie and Alyth, and another branch goes direct, to Forfar, the county town. The Caledonian are joint owners with the North British Company of the Dundee and Arbroath railway, which connects Dundee with Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen and the whole north-east of Scotland. The North British has running powers for a certain distance over the east and west lines, and has a joint right in part of both the terminal stations—one at the east and the other at the west end of Dock street; the company has also constructed the Arbroath and Montrose direct line, which increases the facilities for communication between Dundee and the south-eastern portion of Forfarshire and the south-western portion of Kincardineshire. Alongside the west station, at the end of Dock street, is the North British or Tay Bridge station. In 1870 the North British Railway Company obtained an Act of Parliament for bridging the Tay at Dundee. This bridge was designed by Sir Thomas Bouch, the company's engineer, the plans being for a single line of rails only. On the 31st May, 1878, the bridge was 10,612 feet in length, and consisted of 85 spans, some of these being over 90 feet above high water level, and the cost was said to be £350,000; but on the evening of the 28th December, 1879, during the prevalence of a gale of unusual force, while the mail train from Edinburgh was passing over it, the whole of the "high girders," extending over 13 spans, were blown into the river, together with the train, leaving a gap of 3,000 feet, and upwards of 70 persons perished; the present bridge, erected from plans by William Henry Barlow C.E., F.R.S. was approved by Parliament in May, 1881, and the structure, starting from the south side of the Firth of Tay, at Wormit, comprises 84 spans, varying in breadth from 50 to 245 feet; the first four above high water mark are continued by 23 of varying size, which take the line to the south side of the navigable channel, where they connect with the 13 great spans crossing the mid channel; of these, the southern ones vary in height above high water from 63 to 65 feet; the four main spans have a height of 77 feet clear, and those on the south 58 to 75 feet; 36 spans continue the bridge from the north side of the mid channel to Dundee shore, and seven land spans carry it into Dundee; the trains run on the lower part of the great spans, and on the upper portion of the others; the whole length is about 2 miles, and it has a double set of rails on a steel floor; the foundations are on iron caissons; the contractors were Sir William Arrol and Company, of Glasgow, and the bridge was opened for general traffic in June, 1887.

The situation of Dundee is very beautiful, the river here is 2 miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence called "Dundee Law," 572 feet in height. The picturesque coast of Fifeshire forms the southern border of the Tay, and a steam ferry-boat affords hourly communication between the opposite shores of the estuary. The greater part of the mansions of the opulent are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town, which commands a view of the river and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast, including Newport, Wormit and Broughty Ferry, 3 miles further down, places which are now residential suburbs of Dundee.

History.—Dundee is a place of considerable antiquity. From a fishing hamlet it came to be a walled town, with a castle of considerable strength. During the usurpation of Edward I. the town was made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince and Robert Bruce, Dundee was twice taken and retaken. The patriot Wallace, is said to have received his education at the Grammar School of Dundee. Of the castle of Dundee, not a vestige now remains. Its site was near the present Castle street, formed by blasting a portion of the rock on which it stood. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II., and again in that of Edward VI., but on each occasion it speedily recovered, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns, being several times pledged as security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. It was also a place of royal residence, there being a palace (known as Whitehall) to the south of the Nethergate, and a mint at the foot of the Overgate. Robert III. was the first sovereign who struck coin at the mint. Dudhope Castle, originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard bearers to the Scottish kings, stands on the face of the rising ground to the north of the town, and was at his death the property of Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee: in recent times it was used as a military barracks, but the castle and grounds now form a part of the Dudhope Park. In Dundee the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders. So zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of "the second Geneva." In 1544 George Wishart, who suffered martyrdom at St. Andrews, preached here, and on one occasion narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of one of Cardinal Beaton's emissaries: in memory of his escape the East Port or Cow-gate, where he preached, and the only portion of the old walls extant, is still kept standing. In April, 1645, the Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault. The last calamity of this kind that befell the town was its capture and plunder a few years later by General Monk, an event which is the subject of many local traditions. A few eminent men have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth, education or labour:—Hector Boece, the historian; Sir William Wallace; John Blair; Ferguson, the poet; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and in more recent days, Drs. Small, Willison, Davidson, and Russell; Nicoll, the poet; George Gilfillan, the critic and preacher; Bishop Forbes; Dr. Thomas Dick, the astronomer and christian philosopher; the naval victor, Admiral Duncan; and Lord Ritchie, a former Chancellor of the Exchequer. The author of the "Song of the Shire," Thomas Hood, also resided in the town for a short time, and some of his first efforts at versifying appeared in the columns of the "Dundee Advertiser."

Municipal.—Dundee was created a royal burgh by William the Lion in return for the attention paid to his brother, the Earl of Huntingdon, who, in returning from the Crusades, was shipwrecked near this port. The oldest charter now extant is one granted by Robert Bruce, confirming these burghal privileges. It was made a city by a royal charter granted in 1889, and its chief magistrate was advanced to the dignity of Lord Provost in 1892: in 1894 it was created a county, the lord provost being appointed lord lieutenant of the same. The municipal government of Dundee is exercised by a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a hospital master, a kirk master, and a council, including the magistrates of 28 members. There are 13 trade guilds, viz.: the Masons, Wrights and Slaters (known as the Three United Trades), the Bakers, Shoe Makers, Glovers, Tailors, Bonnet Makers, Fleshers, Hammermen, Weavers, Dyers and the Maltmen incorporation. Six courts are held within the town—the Burgh of Bailie Court, the Sheriff's Court, the Commissary Court, the Guild Court, the Police Court and the Justice of Peace Small Debt Court. The city is divided into nine districts and wards. Dundee sends two representatives to Parliament. The city is lighted with gas from works the property of the burgh, but in March, 1892, the electric light was provided from works, erected by the Corporation, in Dudhope crescent, at a cost for buildings and fittings of £30,000: a larger electric station is now (1907) being erected near the river, at a cost of over £50,000. The corporation also own the waterworks, drawing their supplies from Monkrie, an artificial loch 11½ miles north-east of Dundee, and from Lintrathen, a large Highland loch, 23 miles from Dundee. In 1899 they acquired the tramway system. The Town House, also called the City Chambers, in the High street, was completed in 1734, from designs by the elder Adam, and comprises a Guild Hall, Record Chamber, Council Chamber and Town Clerk's and other offices; the front has a piazza, and from the centre of the building rises a spire 140 feet high.

Commerce and Manufactures.—Dundee is a place of great commercial activity, and is the principal seat of the linen and jute industries; the rapid increase, both of the productions and shipping, is the most striking feature of its recent history. When Monk captured the place in 1651, 60 vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoils "in the wars throughout the three nations;" the plunder, however, did not enrich the captors, for the ships sunk in passing the bar. For several years subsequently few vessels floated in the deserted harbour; but in 1669 37 vessels arrived in the port; in 1673, 49; in 1680, 85; by 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was chiefly the resort of fishermen and smugglers. But the situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, caused the tide of commerce to turn, and the town, from 1792, has continued to progress. In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, of 8,560 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards were nearly 12,000 tons, while the coasting trade was about 60,000. Since 1815 the increase has been enormous, and the total revenue from all sources from that date, until May, 1906, amounted in the aggregate to £3,308,108 13s. 9d. During the year ending May, 1906, the revenue amounted to £77,759 6s. 9d.; in the year ending May, 1861, it was only £25,329. In consequence of the augmentation of its shipping, new sea walls and quays were built, the tidal harbour was extended, wet docks and graving docks constructed, and there are now but few ports in Great Britain affording greater facilities and accommodation for shipping. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of commissioners, appointed annually under an Act of Parliament; but by an Act passed in June, 1830, the control was transferred to trustees, elected annually, the provost, bailies and dean of guild to be perpetual trustees, in virtue of their office. The total expenditure for maintaining the harbour from July, 1815, to May 31, 1906, inclusive of interest on debt, amount credited to sinking, depreciation and reserve funds, was £2,972,762 10s. 6d. The total cost of harbour and property up to the same date amounted to £1,248,236 6s. The debt due by the Dundee Harbour on the 31st May, 1906, amounted to £395,597 12s. 4d.

The number of sailing and steam vessels of foreign countries that entered the port (including Perth) during the year 1905 was 328, of 168,940 tonnage, and from British possessions 39, of 97,514 tonnage; included in the foregoing were 266 British, of 229,346 tonnage. The numbers cleared were, foreign countries 99, of 49,247 tonnage; British possessions 6, of 4,402 tonnage; included were 90 British of 50,587 tonnage.

In the general coasting trade (also including Perth) 1,036 vessels entered, of 295,347 tons, and 1,127 cleared, of 486,867 tons. In the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 15 entered, of 4,566 tons, and 61 cleared, of 20,379 tonnage.

The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," on December 31st, 1905, was 131, of the aggregate register of 99,975 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships from this port. Steam navigation is conducted by the Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London twice a week and to Hull weekly. There is also regular steam communication with Newcastle, Liverpool, Manchester, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Belfast &c. besides several large steamers engaged in the coal trade. Direct steam communication is carried on with New York at irregular intervals. The number of fishing boats registered at Dundee on December 31st, 1905, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," was 183, aggregate tonnage 2,038, employing 543 hands. In 1905, 12 vessels were built; registered tonnage, 10,734. In addition 10 were built for foreigners, of 1,066 net tonnage.

The earliest articles produced in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. The glass manufacture has died out, as has also the sugar refining, which was once carried on. In 1866, however, linseed crushing was established, and has since been carried on to a moderate extent. The manufacture of boots and shoes, tanning, currying, leather belting and mill furnishings is carried on by Messrs. H. Henderson and Sons on a very extensive scale, in connection with large distributing warehouses in Glasgow and Aberdeen. The wholesale shoe trade, which at one time flourished in this town, has been revived, and there are two large factories, employing a considerable number of persons. The manufacture of marmalade has for many years employed a large number of hands, Dundee marmalade being famous throughout the world. Messrs. Keiller and Sons and Messrs. Lindsay and Low are both large makers, and there are other firms extensively engaged in this trade. At an early period the wants of shipping led to the introduction of the manufacture of cordage, which still remains a branch of commerce, but not to such an extent as formerly.

The total value of the imports of flax in 1905 was £576,287.

Jute was first brought into notice at Dundee by the late Thomas Neish esq. and was at first imported in small quantities to London & Liverpool, and thence trans-shipped to Dundee; but as the trade grew in importance, manufacturers imported direct from Calcutta, and the direct imports now greatly exceed those into London. Most of the jute received in Liverpool and London also finds its way to Dundee. In 1849 the imports (exclusive of coast-ways) amounted to 8,176 tons; in 1850, 8,127 tons were received. In 1904 (a poor year) 1,080,000 bales of jute, of 400 lbs. each, were imported from Calcutta, the price averaging over £14 per ton; in the year 1905 the quantity was 205,041 tons, of the value of £3,480,015.

The total value of all articles imported in 1905 was £4,927,789.

The exports of manufactured goods from the harbour by no means represent the extent of business done in the town, the larger portion of the manufactured goods being sent by rail to Glasgow and Liverpool for export to the United States, South America, Australia &c.

Other imports from foreign countries to which attention may be directed are timber and whale and seal blubber, the former being from 55,000 to 80,000 loads annually, and the latter varying according to the success or failure of the fishing, but probably averaging not less than 2,500 tons each season. The oil produced from this blubber is chiefly used for "batching" the jute in its raw state, in order to soften the fibre and facilitate the various operations of preparing and spinning.

The value of the principal articles of British and Irish produce exported in 1905 was:—jute yarn, £202,431; jute piece goods, £84,777; line yarn, £45,682; bags and sacks, £137,162; machinery and mill work, £33,704; new ships and boats (not registered as British), with their machinery, £67,705; total value of all articles, £660,874.

The total value of the exports of Foreign and Colonial merchandise in 1905 was £68,920.

The gross amount of Customs Revenue received at this port for the past five years are as follows:—1901, £189,593; 1902, £215,521; 1903, £223,324; 1904, £222,838 & 1905, £211,097.

Originally there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now probably above 100, including spinning and weaving factories, where thread is woven into osenburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowlas &c. At the commencement of the civil war in America, as has been said, the trade of Dundee increased to a most extraordinary extent, fabrics of jute and linen being in great demand to take the place of cotton. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers and millwright work is in a flourishing condition and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Messrs. James Carmichael and Co. Limited, Ward foundry; Thomson, Son and Co. Limited, Douglas foundry; Urquhart, Lindsay and Co. Lim. Blackness foundry; the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited, Lilybank foundry; Gourlay Brothers and Co. Dundee Limited; and Robertson and Orchar Limited, Wallace foundry. Iron ship building and marine engineering are also important features in the general prosperity and industry of the city, and give employment to a large number of artisans. Messrs. Gourlay Brothers and Co. (Dundee) Limited, The Dundee Ship Building Co. Limited and the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited are the principal firms engaged in these important industries. There are also several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs. Bell and Sime Limited and Messrs. Fleming and Barry Limited.

Although Dundee is not conspicuous for architectural beauty, it contains several handsome streets. In the central portion is a wide oblong area, called the High street, on the south side of which stands the Town House. Directly south of this street lie the Docks, and to the south-west the terminal stations of the North British and Caledonian railways, and northward various streets lead to Barrack Park and the high ground known as Dundee Law. The Clydesdale Bank, at the east end of High street, is also a good building. Dock street runs from the railway stations along the line of Docks, and from the west end of Dock street, Union street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops; running north from the centre of Dock street, Commercial street is a splendid thoroughfare, lined on either side by elegant shops and houses, and the old and narrow thoroughfares called Murraygate and Seagate have given place to wide streets. Whitehall street, completed in 1893, runs from the Nethergate southwards; at the lower end it curves semi-circularly towards South Union street on the west, and Green market on the east. In Meadowside new premises were completed and opened in 1899 by the Scottish Provident Institution, the Pearl Life Assurance Co., and the Prudential Assurance Co. The Albert Institute, completed in 1889, is to the south-east of the High school, the western portion was erected from designs by the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. and the eastern and northern portions from others by Mr. Mackenzie, a local architect, and Mr. Alexander, the city architect; the cost of the entire building was about £50,000, exclusive of the site, which cost £8,000. It comprises a large hall (used as the reference library), libraries, reading room, museum, and fine picture galleries. These are free to the public, the town having 42 years ago adopted the Free Libraries Act. Adjoining are the Victoria Art Galleries, opened by the present Duke of Argyll K.T., P.C. October 26th, 1889. In the grounds in front of the Albert Institute is a bronze statue, modelled by Mr. Steel, of Edinburgh, of George Kinloch, the first representative of the burgh in the first reformed Parliament; in the south-west corner of the grounds is a bronze statue of Burns, also by Steel. There is also a statue by John Hutchinson R.S.A. of the late James Carmichael, the inventor of the fan blast, and opposite the principal entrance is a splendid colossal statue in bronze of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by the late Harry Bates A.R.A. erected as a Jubilee memorial in 1887, and unveiled by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. A fountain, erected at considerable cost, faces the west front of the Institute. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure street, erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000, is a building in the Flemish-Gothic style of the 14th century, with a fine tower. To the south of the Albert Institute stand a Club House, in the Venetian style, the United Free church, and the National Bank buildings. The Royal arch, in the centre of Dock street and spanning the north end of the Mid quay, raised to commemorate the landing near this spot of H.M. Queen Victoria, on her first visit, consists of a wide central arch, flanked by two of smaller dimensions; each front is richly sculptured, and octagonal turrets rise from the summit. The Custom House, in Dock street, is a building with a Classic portico. The Sailors' Home, opened by the late Earl of Dalhousie, 16 December, 1881, at a cost of upwards of £12,000, is designed in the Elizabethan style, and has sleeping room for about 80 seamen; and here also are the offices of the Mercantile Marine Department. The Public Hall, in Bank street, is a building in the Italian style; the hall itself is 130 by 60 feet, and 42 feet 6 inches high, with room for about 2,500 people. The organ, provided in 1864, cost £1,500. The orchestra will accommodate some 280 performers, and there is a gallery holding 200 persons. The Court House, in which the assizes are held, is a building in the Classic style, upon the pediment of which the Royal arms are boldly sculptured; adjoining it is the gaol. The Post Office, in Meadows, opened in 1898, is a building of stone, in the French Renaissance style, and cost £21,366.

The Eastern Club is in Albert square; the New Club, in Commercial street, established in 1901, has about 200 members, mainly gentlemen in practice in the various professions in Dundee; the Liberal club is in Reform street, and there are several other smaller clubs.

The Corporation Public Baths and Washhouses, in Constable street, were opened in 1902.

Ecclesiastical.—The "Old Steeple," in the Nethergate, a little west of High street, is a fine solid tower, built, probably, the early part of the 15th century; it is 156 feet high, with walls 8 feet thick, and formerly contained 2 bells, the larger recast in 1819 and the smaller bearing the date 1693; but when the "Steeple" was restored in 1872, under the superintendence of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, 6 more bells were provided, being gifts from various citizens, and the whole 8 were rehung in the bell chamber: this "Steeple" forms the tower of the town churches, of which there are three, all connected with it, and known as the "East," "South" and "Steeple" churches; the two first were destroyed by fire in 1841, but were rebuilt in a very short time, the East church being reopened on the 10th March, 1844, and the South church in 1847; the same architect, Mr. Burn, of Edinburgh, designed both churches, which are in the Decorated style: the parish church consists of a nave of five bays, with clerestory and open timber roof and side aisles divided from the nave by arcades of clustered pillars: there are galleries in the aisles and across the west end: the stained east window of three lights was erected in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria: nearly all the other windows are filled with stained glass, and there are two memorial brasses: the South church stands north and south, and has a western transept, containing a gallery. St. Clement's, or "The Steeple" church, which is the westernmost of the three, is a plain edifice of stone in the Perpendicular style, erected in 1789: a gallery surrounds all three sides. These three churches are really one large building, the Steeple church being the nave, the South church the north and south transepts, and the East church the cancel, and the whole occupies the site of the original church of St. Mary. Adjoining these churches is the Town or Market Cross, moved here from High street, and consists of a pillar surmounted by a unicorn supporting a shield.

St. Paul's United Free church and St. Enoch's Established church are in the Nethergate, and St. Mark's Established church, St. John's United Free church and the McChesney Memorial United Free church, in the Perth road. St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral church for the diocese of Brechin, situated on the Castle Hill, was built c. 1855 and consecrated in 1865, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, from the designs of the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. and has a tower with lofty spire, containing a peal of bells: it will seat 600 persons. In the Cowgate is a meeting-house for the Glasites—a sect founded by Mr. John Glass, who was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. The Gilliland Memorial Hall, in Whitehall crescent, is used for worship by the congregation of the Rev. Walter Walsh; it is also adapted for holding concerts and meetings.

For other places of worship, see page 724.

Schools.—The High School, in Euclid crescent, was erected in 1834, at a cost of £10,000, since which extensive additions have been made to it, including a gymnasium, workshop, physical laboratory and recreation ground, and class rooms for girls have also been erected in Euclid street: the institution is largely indebted to the late ex-Bailie Harris, who gave £20,000 for the purpose of improving it: Miss Harris, his sister, has also been a great benefactor. The Harris Academy, in Park place, erected with a sum of £10,000, bequeathed for the purpose of promoting secondary education, was opened in 1885. The Morgan Academy, in the Forfar road, owes its existence to the benevolence of the late Mr. Morgan, a native of Dundee, who left the bulk of his fortune, reduced by litigation to £73,500, for its erection and maintenance. It was originally designed for 100 boys, the sons of tradesmen, mechanics and persons of the working classes generally, in Dundee, Forfar, Montrose or Arbroath, the preference being given to the boys of parents belonging to this town, but in 1889 the Endowed Schools Commission converted it into a secondary school; the building, erected at a cost of £15,000, is in the Flemish-Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Peddie and Kinnear, architects, of Edinburgh, and is quadrangular in form, two storeys in height, with an interior open court, and a centre tower rising to a height of 120 feet. University College, in the Nethergate, was originally founded and endowed through the munificence of the late Miss Baxter, of Balgavies, and the late Dr. John Boyd Baxter, who provided a sum of £150,000 for this purpose, buildings already on the site were utilised as class rooms, laboratories, and a college hall: a large chemical laboratory was erected at a cost of about £12,877, and £69,000 was spent in purchasing and equipping the buildings, and £100,000 appropriated as a permanent endowment fund: the deed of endowment and trust directs that the college shall be for promoting the education of persons of both sexes for the study of science, literature and the fine arts: the later endowments include the John Boyd Baxter chair of natural history, the J. F. White chair of botany, the T. H.

Cox chair of anatomy, the Harris chair of physics, the physiology chair, the Armistead bursaries, the David Myles bursaries, the smart bursary in engineering, the Laing bursary in engineering, the William Strong research scholarship, the Carnegie physics laboratory, the Ellenbank and Unionmount extensions, given by Miss Symes, of St. Helens, and others, and the joint medical school by Sir W. Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. and others; there is also a large general fund for providing and equipping new buildings, and for preserving the open spaces in front, used as botanical gardens: the institution is entirely unsectarian, and has been affiliated to the ancient University of St. Andrews, and Faculties of Arts, Medicine, Science and Law, have now been established: there are at present thirteen professors and a number of lecturers. St. Andrew's Provincial Committee for the Training of Teachers, in connection with University College, was formed in 1906. The Technical Institute, in the grounds of University College, opened in 1888, was established with a sum of £20,000 (afterwards increased to about £26,000), left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. for the foundation of a school for the instruction and training of artisans in their various trades and arts, and during the session 1906-7 there were upwards of 1,000 students. The Dundee Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is at Craige terrace, overlooking the river. The Dundee Industrial Schools Society's School for girls, at Balgay, Blackness road, was erected in 1896, at a cost of £12,000, and will hold 120; the school for boys is at Baldovan, a healthy village to the north of the town. The "Mars" Training-ship for Homeless and Destitute Boys, is an old three-decker, moored in the Tay, at woodhaven, and here four hundred boys are trained, chiefly with a view to their joining the merchant service or entering the Royal Navy. The Institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, established in 1846, and situated at Dudhope Bank, Locher road, is maintained by the directors of the Dundee Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, from the interest of invested funds, and from property left by the late James Key esq.: new dormitories were added in 1906 at a cost of about £400.

The Dundee District Lunatic Asylum, at West Green, in the parish of Liff and Benvie, about 4 miles west of Dundee, was erected in 1882, at a cost of £50,000, from designs by Messrs. Edward and Robertson, architects, of Dundee, and will hold upwards of 400 patients; the Directors of the Dundee Royal Asylum lease the private asylum, erected in 1899 at a cost of about £20,000, from the District Board, and this building is available for about 70 persons; the grounds in connection extend to nearly 100 acres. The Poor House, opened in November, 1856, at a cost of about £10,000, and since enlarged, at the sole expense of Mr. Molison, chairman of the Parochial Board, at a cost of upwards of £1,000, will now hold about 370 inmates; in 1893 a sick hospital containing 320 beds was built, at a cost of £25,000. The Curr Night Refuge, in West Bell street, erected by money left by the late Mrs. Curr, affords a retreat for the night to homeless strangers. The Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to Dudhope park, from designs by Messrs. Coe and Goodwin, of London, has two wings, a central tower, and embattled parapets; the infirmary provides for 300 in-patients; in 1895 a new operating theatre was built at a cost of £2,000; in 1895-7 two Nurses' Homes were erected at a cost of £6,000, and in 1900 two pavilions and an additional nurses' home were opened, the whole costing £7,000; in 1906 a further extension for 120 beds was made at a cost of £18,500, and the hospital has now 410 beds. The Royal Victoria Hospital for Incurables, Balgay, Blackness road, established in 1899, at a cost of £10,000, is a building of stone in the Renaissance style, from designs by the late Mr. J. Murray Robertson, and has 40 beds; the hospital has an endowment of £40,000. In 1899 Mr. Alexander Moncur, of this city, gave £10,000 to establish and equip a hospital for consumption; to this hospital a new cancer wing was added in 1907 at a cost of £5,500, defrayed by the late ex-Provost Moncur; the designs were prepared by Mr. James Findlay, architect, and the building now holds 55 patients. The Public Gymnasium, in the Ward road, opened in 1892, and designed by Bailie McCulloch, of Dundee, is in the French Renaissance style: it is spacious and well appointed, and available also for instruction in cycle riding. Adjoining the old entrance to the barracks is the public bleaching green, and near this spot a time gun has been placed.

Besides the burial grounds belonging to the corporation, the Dundee Cemetery Co. Limited, has a fine cemetery in the Perth road, covering an area of 12 acres: in this cemetery lie the remains of William Thom, known as the Inverury Poet, and the author of the "Mitherless Bairn." To the east of the Baxter Park is the Eastern Necropolis, a beautifully laid out cemetery, and to the west of the Balgay Park is the Western Necropolis.

Baxter park, at the east end of the city, and upwards of 30 acres in extent, was presented to the town in 1863 by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and endowed with funds necessary to maintain it at a total cost of not less than £50,000; the park was beautifully laid out by the late Sir Joseph Paxton. In 1869 the corporation acquired Balgay Hill, a wooded eminence at the west end of the town, to be used partly as a public park and partly as a cemetery for the west end of the burgh; the portion retained as a public park is 36 acres in extent, finely wooded, and from the higher parts of the ground magnificent views are obtained. The Law Hill, behind the town, has also been laid out as a place of recreation. The inhabitants further have the use of Magdalen Green, close by the river at the west end of the town, and Dudhope Park, 23 acres in extent, acquired by the corporation early in 1895; the Castle is used as a museum of mechanics, engineers, and other industries. The "Esplanade" was formed by an arrangement with the railway companies when the Tay Bridge Works were constructed, and was later extended westward.

Newspapers.—There are two daily morning papers, the "Dundee Advertiser" and "The Dundee Courier," and one daily evening paper, "The Evening Telegraph." The weekly papers, six in number, are "The People's Journal," "The Weekly News," "The Dundee Catholic Herald," "The People's Friend" and "People's Penny Stories" (penny weekly magazine journals), and "The Red Letter." Immediately opposite the Kinnaird Hall stands a building, 215 feet in length, the printing establishment of the "Dundee Advertiser," "People's Journal," "Evening Telegraph and Post" and "People's Friend" and "People's Penny Stories" &c. The New Courier buildings are in Meadowside.

The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and there is a cattle and sheep market held at Caroline port every Tuesday. Fairs—Stobb's fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 11th July, or the first Tuesday following (o.s.); Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 26th August, if that day falls on Sat. Sunday or Monday, then the first Tuesday after; and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September, the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair. Feeding markets for servants are held on the 28th May and on the 28th November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

In the parish, the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. of Harecraig and Douglas, David Charles Guthrie esq. of Craigie, and Robert McGavin esq. J.P. of Ballumbie, are the principal landowners. The area of Dundee Combination civil parish is 10,732 acres, and the population in 1891 was 109,875, and in 1901, 163,626, of whom 159,335 were in the burgh and 1,865 in Broughty Ferry police burgh. The population of the royal and municipal burgh, which includes part of Mainis and Strathmartine civil parish (exclusive of shipping), in 1901 was 160,878, and of the parliamentary, 159,083. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was:—first, 15,263; second, 14,722; third, 17,019; fourth, 19,340; fifth, 22,039; sixth, 15,351; seventh, 19,213; eighth, 19,303; ninth, 18,622; total, 160,878. Included in the total population of Dundee civil parish was 66 officials and 234 patients in the Royal Infirmary and Maternity Hospital, 66 officials and 423 inmates in the Dundee District Asylum, 48 officials and 938 inmates of Dundee East Combination Poorhouses, 10 officials and 219 inmates of Dundee West Combination Poorhouse, 6 officials and 177 prisoners in Dundee Prison, 130 in the Industrial School for Girls. The rateable value of the city is about £911,000.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 19,492.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was:—St. Andrew, 5,460; St. Clement, 4,336; St. David, 17,254; St. Enoch, 1,992; St. John, 5,843; St. Luke, 4,221; St. Mark, 8,887; St. Mary, 37,890; St. Matthew, 7,554; St. Paul, 8,829; Chapelshade, 6,220; Clepington, 7,898; Logie, 6,532; Rosebank, 8,961; Wallacestown, 3,508.

LOCHEE is an important but scattered suburb, forming part of the royal burgh of Dundee, within the united parishes of Liff and Benvie, and extending one mile and a half north-west from Dundee: it contains several mills and factories for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute &c.; the principal of these being the Camperdown Jute, Flax and Hemp Works, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers Limited, covering a space of about 25 acres, and giving employment to about 5,000 persons: these works have a tower with a peal of fine-toned bells, and a clock with four dials, which are illuminated at night. There is also a furniture manufactory here. The Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway passes through this place, and is connected by a branch. There are two railway stations, one in Lochee and the other at Lochee West, about a mile north. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Dundee Savings Bank. The Free Library, in High street, opened in Dec. 1895, was erected with funds provided by the late Mr. Thomas H. Cox, of Duncarse, and comprises a library, reading room and baths. Camperdown House is the residence of the Earl of Camperdown, and Clement Park is the residence of Miss Cox. The Established church of St. Luke was the gift of Thomas H. Cox esq.; there is another Established church, two United Free churches, and Baptist and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1861, and rebuilt in 1888, will seat 450 persons, and attached to it is St. Columba's Mission. The United Free Church of Scotland, erected at a cost of upwards of £6,000, is a building in the Middle Pointed Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of 130 feet, and containing 8 bells, the first erected in any church in Dundee, and presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers: the church affords 1,000 sittings. The United Free Church of Scotland, in Logie street, erected in 1895, will hold 700. Four manse have been erected for the ministers of the United Free churches and two Established churches. Lochee Park, presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers, at a cost, including endowment, of upwards of £20,000, comprises 25 acres, and has a lodge of two storeys, with a tower. The population of Lochee ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,914.
